Deadline Donors Push Center Fund Over $10,000

The Herald's emergency fund to help save The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center has passed $10,000 — and additional donations are still coming in.

By Saturday, the fund had received a total $10,345 — $2,845 over the minimum goal of $7,500 required to keep the family service agency from curtailing service to Northwest suburbs.

The success of the appeal was met with rejoicing by staff members of the Center, headquartered at 1797 Oakton St., Des Plaines.

"The overwhelming response by the Northwest suburban area to the Herald's articles and editorials has been tremendous," said Mrs. Margaret Lisinski, district supervisor for The Salvation Army Center. "We are indeed deeply grateful for the community's interest and recognition for the need for the service and financial support.

"The emergency fund will enable us to keep the Center's present staff of social workers," she added, "and we will continue to be open five days and four nights a week."

THE CENTER IS the only professional family service agency available to suburbanites living in Des Plaines and Wheeling, Elk Grove, Palatine, and Schaumburg Townships.

To avoid a cutback in service to this area, the Center had to raise at last $7,500 by today. This goal represented one-half of the current $15,000 operating deficit. The balance is to be provided by a "matching grant" from a private foundation to be announced later this month by The Salvation Army in Chicago.

Center officials expressed hope that the "matching grant" will be increased to meet whatever total is contributed to the Herald emergency fund.

"To accommodate the large number of late donors, we are extending the fund drive deadline," said Charles E. Hayes, Herald editor in chief.

Donations may be sent to the Herald "Center Fund," P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. A final list of contributors will be published in Thursday's Herald.

The funds will be presented to the Center on Monday, Aug. 16 at a "victory" luncheon sponsored by the Herald.

AMONG MAJOR contributions made to the fund during the last few days were $177.65 from the Community Service Corps of Wheeling and Buffalo Grove, $100 from Bantam Books Inc., Des Plaines, and $100 from Peep's Hot Dogs, Arlington Heights.

Since the Herald fund was announced June 21, more than 1,800 readers have responded to the appeal. Support also has come from 24 Protestant and Catholic churches, seven service clubs, and several business firms.

If the foundation grant "matches" the fund total, the Center will be able to expand its present level of service as well as meet its 1971 deficit.

"We hope to secure enough money to add another full-time caseworker," explained Mrs. Lisinski, who added this would increase their present caseload capacity by 25 per cent.

You Can Still Help!

Contributions may still be made to The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center emergency fund.

Donations may be sent to Herald "Center Fund," P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. The final list of donors will be published in Thursday's Herald.

Jazz Band's Trip To Europe Is Going 'Smoothly'

The Elk Grove High School Jazz band's trip to Europe is proceeding "smoothly" with the 38 students and 15 parents thoroughly enjoying themselves, reported Band Director Douglas Peterson in a letter to the Herald.

"Tomorrow we head for Austria," he said, in the letter sent from Germany at the end of the first week of the 21-day tour that began July 17. The band is due back in Chicago next Sunday night.

"Things went smoothly until we reached New York," Peterson jokingly reported. "Our charter flight landed at Bangor, Me., instead of Kennedy International."

"A man on board had a heart attack," he explained, forcing the plane to land in Maine and causing a six-hour delay in the trip across the Atlantic.

THE GROUP STAYED briefly in England before crossing the North Sea by boat and arriving some eight hours later at the Hook of Holland.

After a canal boat sightseeing tour of Amsterdam the group arrived July 19 in Sneek, The Netherlands, where they stayed with Dutch families.

"The best experience of the trip was meeting our friends in Holland," Peterson said. "Everyone made lasting friends.

"We played our first concert there in Grouw. Our unofficial guide was a teenage guy named Casse (literally 'Cheese,' which is what we called him.)

"No one can ever forget the fantastic success of the second concert in Korkum and the graciousness of our hosts, The Advendo Marching Band. We proved that international good will and world peace can be a reality."

The band members arrived in Mannheim, Germany, July 21, by bus where they stayed at the Hotel Mack, and played a concert at the Heidelberg Concert Hall. The next stops were Dinkelsbuhl and Garmisch.

"EVERYONE AGREED that Germany was beautiful, Bavaria especially," Peterson said.

"One member of the band was relieved to find out that Germany didn't live up to his impressions of secret police and people being tortured in the streets.

"Who can ever forget searching the dryed-up moat at Dinkelsbuhl for a passport at midnight," Peterson said, explaining that one member of the tour who thought he lost his passport finally remembered that he left it in another jacket.

The roughest part of the trip was the crossing of the North Sea and the drive through the Bavarian Alpine roads where most members of the band got sick from the ride, he said.

"But the most common problem is the post cards," he said. "Everyone was told to write every day. The only hang-up left is mailing the cards."

THE BAND WAS scheduled to be in Salzburg, Austria, July 25, followed by stosp in Liechtenstein and then Montreux, Switzerland, July 28.

They were to be in Paris Saturday for a concert beneath the Eiffel Tower, followed by a ferry boat trip across the English Channel and a train ride to London, arriving today at Victoria Station.

Tonight was to be spent in Guildford at the University of Surrey where the band was to spend the next six nights.

„ELK GROVE BAND" met Jazz in Workum en Grouw

Vandaag, morgen en woensdag ontvangt „Advendo" weer gasten van de andere zijde van de Oceaan. Ditmaal is het een jazzband en wel de „Elk Grove Band", een jeugdige formatie uit Elk Grove in Illinois.

De gasten zijn ondergebracht bij gastgezinnen in Sneek. Zij treden echter niet hier op. In samenwerking met „Holland-Telstar N.V." is er voor gezorgd dat men ze hedenavond in Grouw en morgen (dinsdagavond) in Workum kan beluisteren.

Het is beslist de moeite waard.

THOUGH NOT QUITE like the Apollo 15 lift off last week, these summer school students at Grove Junior High School in Elk Grove Village still get a kick out of making their own rockets and launching them in a park near the school at Elk Grove Boulevard and Ridge Avenue.

by LINDA PUNCH

The scene is Mission Control: Grove Junior High School

A hushed crowd stands at a distance from the launch pad where a model of an Honest John missile awaits launching. The control officer makes a last minute check before giving the word for blast off.

In a rush of smoke the rocket soars 400 feet then begins its descent. As the parachute opens, members of the recovery team hop on their bikes and head for the landing zone.

Another successful mission by members of the model rocketry and aviation class at Grove Junior High School in Elk Grove Village.

The course, part of School Dist. 59's summer school program, is the brainchild of physical education instructor Sid Miller. Divided into three parts, the class is designed to teach the students the basics of aeronautical theory and construction.

In part one the students learn the basics of aerodynamics and rocket stability. Part two involved construction of models and part three is practical aerodynamics — the launching of rockets and free flights of planes.

ACCORDING TO Miller, student interest is split fairly evenly between aviation and rocketry.

Although most of the time is spent on construction of the model airplanes and rockets, the students manage to launch rockets at least twice a week.

"We usually use Friday as a launch day, although it varies with the weath-

No Low-Cost Housing Sites Here: Study

A recent study of the Northwest suburbs shows no sites are available which can meet federal requirements for low-income housing, according to statements made at Thursday night's meeting of the Arlington Heights low and moderate-income housing study committee.

The high cost of land in the suburban area exceeds the limitations established by the federal government, according to Bernard Lee who made a surprise visit to the meeting. Lee is a commissioner of the Cook County Housing Authority (CCHA).

During the question-and-answer period, following a speech on the Rockford scattered-site housing project, Lee told committee members that "unless the federal government loosens its restrictions there just aren't any sites available."

Lee said any discussion of Arlington Heights forming a housing authority to build low-income units was merely "academic." The high land costs in the village more than exceed limitations of cost as established by the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Later in the meeting, the executive director of the CCHA said that he agreed with Lee's comments. Victor Walchirk said HUD uses a general rule of thumb on the cost of property. This general rule states that land purchased to build one unit of low-income housing will cost no more than $3,000.

AS ONE RESIDENT in the audience pointed out, the lowest priced lot in Arlington Heights is probably about $8,500.

In a high-cost area, low-income housing site proposals are generally for what is now publicly owned property, Walchirk said. By donations of the publicly owned property or selling below market cost, CCHA is able to build low-income housing projects for the elderly.

Walchirk reported to the committee that he thought a need for low-income housing built by a public housing authority was not needed in Arlington Heights except for senior citizens dwellings. However, the village does have a need for moderate-income housing, preferably built by private developers, he said.

When private developers build moderate-income housing projects the federal government subsidizes certain costs and the property remains on the public tax rolls.

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

The Senate is beginning its final week before Congress' long summer recess faced with critical measures to extend the draft and insure the nation's largest defense contractor against bankruptcy. Senators must decide whether to revive the draft which expired July 1 and whether to guarantee repayment of $250 million in bank loans to Lockheed Aircraft Corp. Floor leaders advised Senate members to be prepared for late night sessions, not only to deal with these crucial measures, but possibly to take action to end a nationwide rail strike and approve an overhaul of regulations controlling political campaign spending.

The steel workers are seeking a pact providing a 30 per cent pay increase over three years — about the same wage package won earlier this year from the aluminum, can and copper industries.

Move To Dupage County

Indians Abandon Des Plaines Camp

Forest Preserve district crews worked Friday and over the weekend cleaning up the abandoned Indian campsite at Big Bend Lake in Des Plaines.

A group of about 50 Indians who had been residents of the camp for almost a month suddenly moved last Friday morning to an abandoned Nike Missile base site at the Argonne National Laboratory in southern DuPage County.

Mike Chosa, Indian leader who had complained of harassment from county officials and sheriff's police, could not be reached for comment Friday.

One member of a small group of Indians who remained Friday morning to gather belongings at the Big Bend campsite told a Herald reporter that harassment by sheriff's police had caused the Indians to leave.

IT WAS LEARNED Friday that the state's attorney's office has decided not to authorize any complaints at this time against several men who reportedly raped two women visitors at the Big Bend camp July 24.

Departure of the Indian group came less than 24 hours after a conference on Friday between Chosa, Chief Arthur Hintz, Capt. Dale Mensching, Det. Robert Zeimet of the Des Plaines Police Department and two assistant state's attorneys.

After the conference, during which the reported rapes were discussed, police and the state's attorneys refused to make any comment on the case.

The two women visitors, both in their 20s, reportedly were attacked about 10 p.m. July 24, one in a tent at the campsite and the other in the nearby woods. They had stayed all day at the camp after bringing supplies and household goods to the Indians.

It could not be learned whether police have been able to identify all the attackers, although they reportedly have the name of at least one of them.

THE WOMEN, both suburban residents, were driven back to their homes after the reported attacks by another visitor to the Indian campsite.

When they departed Friday, the band of Indians left the west shore of Big Bend Lake and the nearby woods in what was described as "disgraceful" condition by Don Peterson, Des Plaines area superintendent for the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

Peterson, who supervised crews at the abandoned campsite Friday, told a Herald reporter that the clean-up will take two or three days to complete.

The Indians, who had complained that forest preserve officials refused to pick up trash at the site while they were there, left two tents and an abandoned auto on the lake shore.

Just inside the woods, were two large piles of trash and household items, mostly clothing, that had been given to the tribe by well-wishers during their month-long stay in Des Plaines.

ONE OF THE PILES, made up solely of clothing, was about 30 feet in diameter and one to three feet deep. The lakeshore and woods were strewn with trash and discarded household items. Also left at the site were a number of outdoor cooking grills and a few pieces of lawn furniture.

The Indian group, which included about 50 full-time residents, moved to Big Bend July 2 after being forced to leave an abandoned Nike missile base at Chicago's Belmont Harbor. Chosa said the Indians occupied the base after a Chicago apartment building in which they were living burned down.

Rail Strike Sidestepped Possibility Of Layoffs

Workers who struck the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern Railway Co. (EJ&E) last Friday sidestepped the possibility of layoffs that could follow a steel industry strike.

"Approximately 40 per cent of the goods carried by rail are steel products," said John Coulter, manpower director of the Chicago Association of Commerce and Industry. "If a steel strike goes into effect, we could see a substantial layoff," he said last week.

He noted that many companies dependent on steel for their products have stockpiled or accumulated a supply to last for several weeks in anticipation of a steel strike.

Coulter made the comment as negotiations continued between the United Steelworkers Union and steel industry representatives. The union set a Saturday night deadline for a strike if a settlement was not reached. Some steelmakers already had started shutting down operations in anticipation of a strike by last Friday.

THE EJ&E WAS one of six rail lines struck Friday by the United Transportation Union, in a dispute over proposed new work rules. Strikes continued against four other railroads Friday. Additional strikes are slated against 12 more roads within two weeks unless the union and the National Railway Labor Conference representing most of the nation's railroads, can hammer out a settlement.

"It's difficult to tell the effect of the strikes, but the EJ&E is a critical line. It is part of the Belt Line service, and several hundred firms depend on it," Coulter said. "It handles mostly manufactured goods and coal.

"Perishables are something of a problem, but trucks can bring in some produce," he said. "Dairy goods should not be affected too much, but beef, pork and lamb as well as certain fruits would probably show shortages if strikes continue."

The EJ&E has more than 400 industrial customers in the towns from Waukegan south through Barrington, Joliet, Chicago Heights and northwestern Indiana, said Robert Schiek, director of public relations. "When the strike took effect, there were cars along the lines," he said. "We picked those up and moved them to a place of safety with supervisory help but our present plans are not to move any more freight.

"We serve a number of the steel mills," said Schiek. "If the steel strike were on and the railroad workers were not on strike we might have to lay off some workers."

At the end of the last week the selective rail strikes had caused price hikes in such commodities as vegetables and chicken feed. Ford Motor Co. announced it will close down three assembly plants because of the strike.

The food industry was hard hit, especially in California, where produce destined for Eastern and Midwest markets piled up on loading docks. Representatives of California agriculture industry estimate that the strikes cost them $5 million a day.

The coal industry was adversely affected by the strike, and the poultry industry was paying higher prices for feed as supplies grew short.

Pure Water Day Slated Today

The Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) will observe its annual Pure Water Day today at Pioneer Plaza, 401 N. Michigan Ave. in Chicago.

This is an annual event commemorating August 2, 1885, a day of heavy rainfall in Chicago when raw sewage backed up in homes and businesses, resulting in a cholera and typhoid epidemic.

Five-year-old Lisa Diane Winterstein will be named by MSD president John E. Egan as "Little Miss Lake Michigan." Trustees and MSD officials will attend the ceremonies and samples of 99 per cent pure effluent — water reclaimed from sewage disposal — will be displayed.

The MSD was organized by the state legislature as a result of the cholera and typhoid epidemic. It was authorized to cope permanently with problems of sewage collection, treatment and disposal, flooding and abatement of pollution in area waterways.

One of the first major steps of the MSD engineers in 1892 was to reverse the flow of the Chicago River to prevent pollution of Lake Michigan.

The MSD reports that today the Chicago area is the only major metropolis on the Great Lakes that can use its beaches.

LOOKS LIKE 8-year-old Lisa Knilans is a winner as she checks out one of the games featured in Friday's "Save the Center" backyard carnival. The event, at 601-605 E. Olive St. in Arlington Heights, attracted more than 60 youngsters.

Aid To Financial Crisis

Center Gets $90 At Kids' Carnival

by KURT BAER

Toes right up to the line, an intense expression on his face, the young boy was bent on tossing the small beanbag through the laughing mouth of the cardboard clown 10 feet in front of him.

The scene was a backyard carnival set up and operated Friday by a group of Arlington Heights children to help the Salvation Army Counseling Center out of a financial crisis.

The day-long carnival succeeded in raising $90 for the center which is the only professional famiy service center agency available to families in the northwest suburbs.

Officials at the Center said Friday that the Herald's "Save the Center" fund had passed the $9,000 mark — $1,662 more than the minimum needed to ensure a matching grant from a private foundation.

"The children got the idea for the carnival from reading about the Center in the newspaper," said Mrs. Gary O. Vavak, 601 E. Olive St., one of the carnival's adult supervisors.

Games, booths, movies, a bake sale and even a spook house were all part of the fun for an estimated 60 youngsters who turned out to exchange nickels, pennies and dimes for small prizes and a good time.

"Hog Wild," a Laurel and Hardy film and cartoons featuring Mr. Magoo proved to be one of the most popular attractions. The cost of admission to the Vavak's garage theatre, like that at most of the other booths, was five cents.

Mrs. Delores Kusiak, 605 E. Olive St., had her garage converted into a spook house for the day. Her ten-year-old son, Kenny, led blindfolded children through the haunted pavilion complete with clanking chains and a dancing skeleton.

A baseball throw, a fishing pond where you were sure to catch a prize, a ring toss, putting green, and a rummage sale were just a few of the attractions.

Those who wanted to stay through lunch could feast on 25 cent hot dogs served by Mrs. Brian Olson, 1302 N. Pine Ave., and a two cent glass of Kool-Aid.

For most of the children this was their first experience with a backyard carnival, although a few said they had worked in carnivals to benefit the fight against muscular dystrophy.

Monica and Judy Parry, 1108 N. Derbyshire Dr., managers of the White Elephant sale, have both worked for dystrophy carnivals, but said the Friday's "Save the Center" carnival was bigger than most they had seen.

Though most of the children at Friday's carnival were too young to fully understand the important work of the Community Counseling Center, several of the youngsters did express some feeling for the charitable services of the Salvation Army.

"They help people," said seven-year-old Linda Vavak. "They give them clothes and if their house burned down they'd help them find a home," she added.

The "Save the Center" carnival was a team effort involving more than 20 children. Included were: Susan and Linda Vavak, 601 E. Olive St.; Kenny and Randy Kusiak, 605 E. Olive St.; Kelly, Karen and Katie McCarthy, 1431 N. Douglas St.; Paul John, Monica and Judy Parry, 1108 N. Derbyshire Dr.; Bucky and Tracy Olson, 1302 N. Pine St; Lisa Knilans, 612 E. Olive St.; Terry and Maria Pizzuto, 619 E. Olive St; Michele Madigan, 1309 N. Arlington Heights Rd.; Daniel Mrozek, 506 E. Olive St., all of Arlington Heights.

Need Homes For Chicago Kids

There's more children from Chicago who want to spend some time in the Northwest suburbs than there are suburbanites willing to open their homes for a couple of weeks.

The 1971 Friendly Town program now in its second session of the summer still needs suburban families to host several inner-city children for a period of two weeks.

Before the first session which ran from July 11 to 25 about 30 children were called and told they couldn't come, according to Mrs Betty Ginger, Rolling Meadows

"We just didn't have any place they could go," she said.

"IT'S KIND OF hard to call a kid who's ready to leave tomorrow and tell him he'll have to wait or maybe not come at all," she added.

Mrs. Ginger and Mrs. Mary Ann Reiter of Arlington Heights are the organizers of the program which arranges for the inner-city children to visit with suburban host families.

Some of the 30 children who missed out on the first session of the Friendly Town program now are visiting in the area for the second session. But several children still need a place to stay.

For the first time since the program was started a third session has been scheduled running from Aug 8 to 22.

"But we're willing to make exceptions, if those dates aren't acceptable to a family who's willing to take a child," Mrs. Ginger said.

"IF THE KIDS don't go at the convenience of the host they don't go at all, so we really don't have a choice," she added.

This year the majority of children involved in the program will come through the Faith Community Church on Chicago's west side. Host families are asked to go to the church on Sunday morning to pick up their guest.

Friendly Town children are given a medical exam before their visits. They also are covered by a $2,500 sickness and accident policy during their visits.

To be eligible, a family must provide their own personal liability insurance, included in most homeowner's policies, and be willing to furnish a personal reference.

FAMILIES WITH no children at home and those who have only infants are asked to request two children Past experience indicates that Friendly Town children who are used to large families, and crowded neighborhoods are happier when they are near children their own ages to play with

Host families will receive the name of their assigned children about two days before the session begins They are asked to contact the child and his family immediately to introduce themselves and ease any of the child's fear.

For further information or to make application for a Friendly Town child, call Mrs Ginger at 259-1188 or Mrs. Reiter at 392-2654.

Coronets Take State Title Again

For the eighth consecutive year, the Coronets senior girls drill team Saturday successfully defended their state championship title.

Composed of high school aged girls from High School Dist. 214, the 84-member drill team placed first in the State American Legion Championship held at Elk Grove High School

Competing against nine other senior drill teams from across Illinois, the Coronets scored 87 9 out of 100 possible points. The closest runner up was the R-Lettes, defending national champions from Round Lake, with a score of 78.2.

The Coronets are directed by Mr. and Mrs George Lindstrom of Kenosha, Wis and assisted by the squad's three captains, Nancee Dally, Sue Pace and Sharon Shields

Co-sponsored by the Arlington Heights Elks Club, V F.W Post 981 and the American Legion Merle Guild Post, the Coronets will travel to Dallas, Texas, Aug. 16 to compete for the National Championship, which they won twice before, and most recently, two years ago in Miami, Fla.

In other events at this weekend's competition, the Cavaliers, a Chicago-based group which has won over 426 first place awards including five national championships since being organized in 1948, captured the senior division drum and bugle corps competition.

The Guardsmen, a drum and bugle corps from Mount Prospect, placed fifth.

Czech Makes His Own 'Great Escape'

by TOM VON MALDER

It sounded like any one of a hundred movie escapes from behind the Iron Curtain complete with the escapee hanging from the undercarriage of a streaking train

But it wasn t It was real and it happened to George Lippert 18 years ago

"I don t know about it being like the movies Lippert said in a recent interview while recalling his adventure "I only know I wouldn t want to do it a second time I don t know if I could "

Lippert who lives at 1301 Cottonwood Ln in Mount Prospect, was born in Prauge Czechoslovakia in 1921 He vividly remembers the 1938 Munich agreement by which France and Great Britain gave his Czechoslovakia to Hitler and the Nazis

"I got married in 1944," Lippert said "It was after the war, in 1945, that I became an active member of the anti-Communist party, called the Beles Party after our president "

BUT IT WASN'T until 1949 that Lippert got into serious trouble with the Communist regime

"I openly voted against the Communists in 1949 and was placed on their blacklist " Lippert said The next year, Lippert was kicked out of his job as a chemist because "I didn't have a positive approach to the Communist regime "

The soft-spoken former refugee took a puff on his cigarette "There was nothing I could do They suggested I go to work in the coal mines "

But, with the help of a friend, he managed to avoid the mine pits and get a job as a buyer in the steel industry

The period of respite for Lippert was short however. In the spring of 1953, he received a secret message from a member of the Communist-controlled labor union "The message said that my days over there are counted "

THIS MESSAGE forced a decision and the decision was to escape. "I knew it was impossible for my whole family to escape as at that time Czechoslovakia was blocked from all sides. But by listening to Radio Free Europe I got the impression that in two to three years the Communist regime would be over Then I could come back."

Yet, once the decision to escape had been made, it could never be certain that he would return or even make it out of the country So, Lippert and his wife got a divorce, with her taking care of their two children

Since it was impossible to get to West Germany directly at that time, the plan was to go over the border to East Germany This was in July

"At the border I could see the soldier and hear the dogs about 200 yards away I laid down on the ground I had brought some black pepper which I spread around my resting place "

The pepper was to throw the dogs off his scent. "The pepper saved my life," Lippert said. He was then free to move across the border into East Berlin.

LIPPERT LEFT Dresden on a regular Berlin express. After an hour's ride, a Russian patrol boarded the train

"They came from one side only so I was able to climb under the car until the next station," Lippert said. The next station was some 50 miles and 30 minutes away

Once back in the train, Lippert had only a short ride before another patrol boarded the train. This time it was the East Germans.

"These were regular patrols But when the Germans came on I had no choice but to face them They came from both sides and I was in the middle with nowhere to go

"I still recall they asked for the identification card of the man next to me and the woman across from me. I had already given up. It was just plain luck "

The guards left without asking to see a card from Lippert, who had none.

The train reached East Berlin without further incident There Lippert was shocked to see the buildings still bombed out "I could only orientate myself by watching the sun go down. I couldn't recognize anything "

The sun went down — to the west, Lippert's goal He walked to the Brandenberg Gate There was no wall yet dividing the city, but barbed wire and armed guards had the same effect Lippert could not get across to West Berlin.

"THERE I WAS completely Lost. So I decided to go ask somebody to help me."

The time was about 5 p.m. and Lippert began walking through the park, trying to judge people by their faces. He picked out an old man and "in my broken German I asked for help to get to West Berlin."

The man advised him to sit and wait until the next morning at 4 a.m. when the border would be opened again.

"This changed my opinion of Germany. From my childhood I had been brought up to hate the Germans and their 300 years of control over my people. It was amazing for me, I realized then there were only good and bad people."

He later met a woman who asked if he were trying to cross the border. Lippert said that in his naivete he told her the truth. She told him she too was waiting to cross and they spent the next lonely, frightening hours together.

The next morning, after hiding from patrols among crowds all night long, they separated with Lippert taking the elevated train to West Berlin. Once there he tried to get a policeman's attention by changing his clothes and swimming in a public fountain.

"I thought one had to do something wrong to get a policeman's attention," Lippert laughed

When he went to the Canadian embassy, there were so many other refugees ahead of him that he was taken to the American Army Intelligence service. Six weeks with them, three with the British and three with the French, as the Allies tried to learn as much as possible from Lippert about conditions in Czechoslovakia.

AT ONE POINT, the French intelligence service asked Lippert to become a spy for them and carry secret codes back to his country In return, they offered him immediate passage to the United States. Otherwise he faced a two-year waiting period.

Lippert said he refused when he learned that agents were being sent over with false codes Arrangements were made by the French to have the Czechs capture these agents so they would be confused by the false codes.

Before coming to the United States, Lippert worked for the U S. refugee program in West Berlin and Munich. He married again in 1958 to Edith, a German girl. In January 1956, he entered this country and settled in Cedar Rapids, Iowa Edith followed later.

The couple now have a five-year-old son, Erik. They moved to Arlington Heights in 1961 when Lippert was offered a job at Pre-Finished Metals in Elk Grove Village, his first job as a chemist since being black-listed by the Communists in 1950.

The Lipperts also have lived in Park Ridge and will shortly move to Schaumburg.

Back in 1968, Lippert helped his son, George, escape. He is now an electronic engineer in San Francisco. The other child from his first marriage, Donna, got as far as Munich where she met and fell in love with a German boy. Lippert's first wife had no desire to leave Czechoslovakia, he said.

er Miller said "We can't launch on a day when there's too much wind "

The longest flight to date was made by an Honest John Missile which traveled six tenths of a mile from the launch site.

Most flights reach a peak of 300 to 400 feet depending on the type of engine used, Miller said

All the planes and rockets are made from balsa wood and cardboard. Although some boys use commercial units, most make the models from scratch following a blueprint

"One advantage of this course is it gives the boys a tremendous incentive to read and understand blueprints," Miller said

MODELS RANGE from a simple rubber band propelled plane to a model of a surface-to-surface missile with a miniature solid fuel engine

"The quality of work varies from student to student," Miller said. "The key to success is not to be negative. Most students want to finish as fast as they can I have to slow them down and encourage them to go step by step."

Although Miller has made more than 200 models, he encourages the students to read and reread blueprints until they understand what they're doing. The boys now do most of the construction on their own although packing and loading of the engines is supervised by Miller.

As an addition to their classroom activities the boys recently attended the National Model Airplane Championships at Glenview Naval Air Station. One class member, Bob Small, took first place for his age group in the Delta Dart competition, where contestants construct and fly a model plane

Not all the students are as successful with their model launchings Several rockets came crashing to the earth because of faulty parachutes and one missile was lost because of an incorrect launch angle.

The class did have one fatality this summer. Construction of a missile carrying a frog failed to protect the animal against the sudden pressure of acceleration. Further flights by animals will be postponed until proper precautions are taken for the animal's safety, Miller said.

Oink, Bahaa, Moooo. . .

Barnyard Brought To Northwest Area

by BRAD BREKKE

"Oink, oink," went the hairy pig.

"Bahaa, bahaa," bleated the lamb.

"Moooo," moaned the cow

"Buck-awk, buck-buck," clucked the chicken, between kernels of corn.

And welcome to the 1971 North Cook County 4-H Fair.

The fair this year was held on Frontage Road, just north of Palatine Road at Rte. 53, in Arlington Heights, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

A lot of animals, a lot of people, a lot of fine exhibits — that's what you found at the fair this year.

IN ONE TENT there were vegetable exhibits. Tomatoes that would make your mouth water, onions big as baseballs, cabbages, carrots, string beans, peppers, cucumbers, beets, potatoes, gords, pumpkins . . .

And oh, yes, corn as "high as an elephant's eye," too!.

If you suffered from hayfever at the fair, it would be only natural. Hay was everywhere and with the fairgrounds just mowed, pollen was so heavy you could almost see it in the air.

Friday morning most of the exhibits were in place, except for a few finishing touches, and 4-Hers from 9 to 19 were scampering from tent to tent, taking in the exhibits from other clubs, along with their friends and mothers.

"I want something to eat mommy. How 'bout some breakfast?" said one little girl.

"Breakfast? Why, Honey, it's nearly time for dinner," answered a man standing nearby, who was obviously a farmer and an early riser.

IN ANOTHER TENT were the animals. Every kind of farm animal and every kind of smell. There were dairy and beef cattle, swine, lambs, horses, chickens, turkeys, ducks, pigeons, rabbits, partridge, quail, pheasant and doves

Another tent housed the woodwork exhibits. On display were all sorts of things 4-Hers had made and carved from wood, including bird houses, duck decoys, stools, chests, gun racks and a standout piece of craftsmanship, a hand-carved chess set.

Games were in a separate tent and in another, canning, yeast bread, pastries and other cooking exhibits.

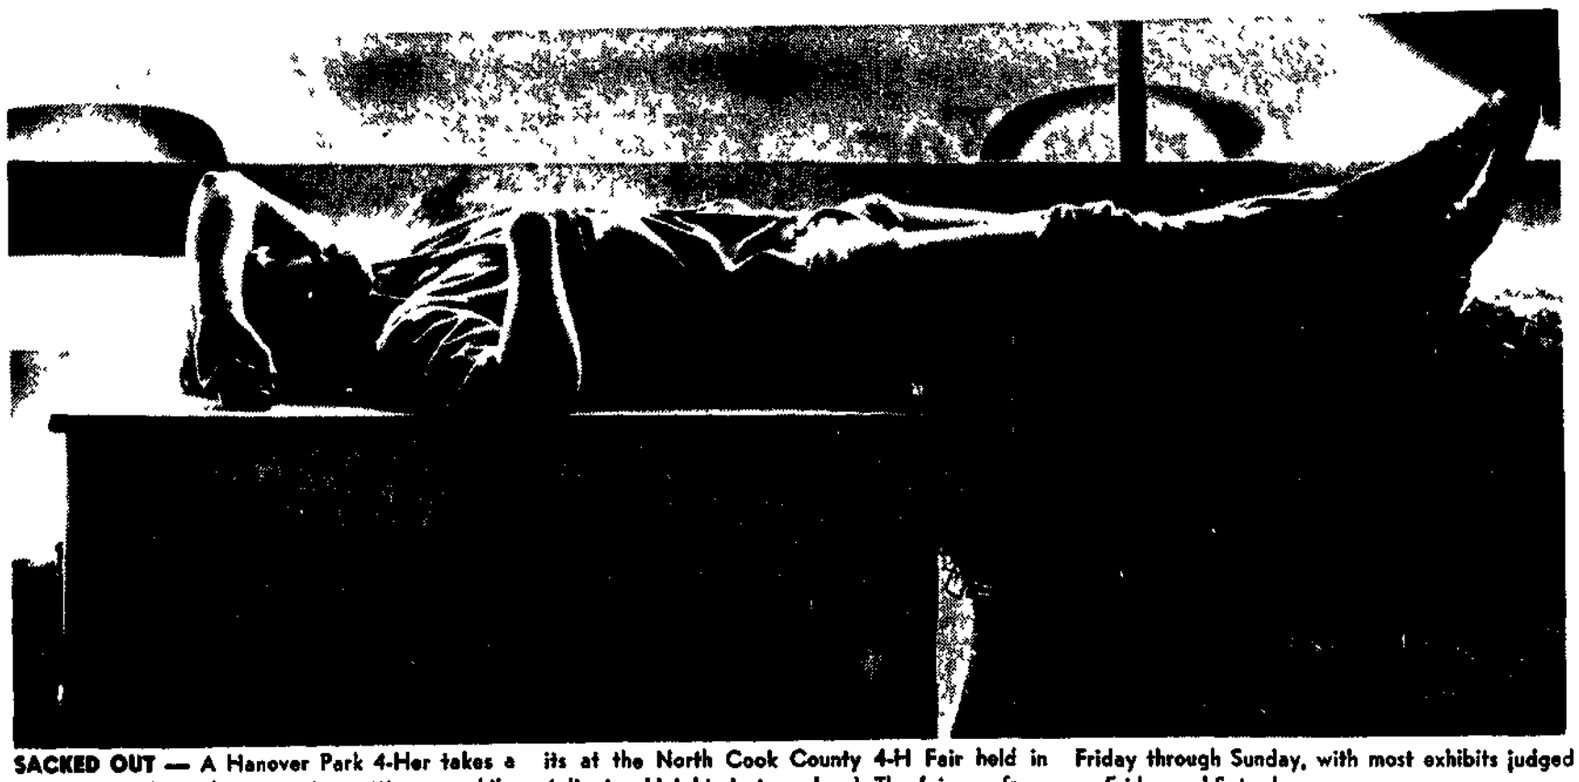
Friday's events began with the judging of 50 projects in 100 different categories, including agricultural exhibits, dress making, cooking, arts and crafts and others. All winners were given trophies.

FRIDAY NIGHT, beginning at 7:30 p.m. the king and queen of the fair were crowned, followed by a magical act

Saturday animals were judged, along with other exhibits, and Sunday the main attraction of the fair, the 4-H horse show was held.

And at 2 p.m. Sunday a dog obedience demonstration was held by the Northwest Obedience Club, Inc.

The 4-H Club has 1,072 members in 73 clubs throughout north suburban Cook County.



SACKED OUT — A Hanover Park 4-Her takes a rest Friday, after a busy morning setting up exhibits at the North Cook County 4-H Fair held in Arlington Heights last weekend. The fair ran from Friday through Sunday, with most exhibits judged on Friday and Saturday.

BUCK-AWK, BUCK-BUCK — Frank Wolfney (left), supervisor of poultry, and Bill Runzel, a 4-H member with the Hanover Hawks, discuss the finer points of chicken raising. Poultry competition was held over the weekend at the North Cook County 4-H fair grounds in Arlington Heights.

Revenue From Fines Is Up In Suburbs

Suburban communities northwest and north of Chicago are receiving about 4 per cent more in revenue this year from the Cook County Circuit Court.

Figures released by Matthew Danaher, clerk of the court, indicated collections in the second and third municipal districts, which serve the suburbs, are running ahead of last year.

In the second district, which includes Arlington Heights, Wheeling, Palatine and Rolling Meadows, a total of $300,000 has been collected in the first half of 1971. That's $4,000 ahead of last year's total at this time.

In the third district, which includes Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Mount Prospect and Schaumburg, collections are set at $411,000 — or $26,000 ahead of last year's pace.

The money returned represents the communities' shares of fines levied in the suburbs. Most of the fines levied are for traffic offenses.

Elk Grove Village is leading all suburban communities through the first half of the year with a collection of $59,134. Third is Des Plaines with $50,989, Arlington Heights is fourth with $47,559 and Schaumburg is fifth with $45,595.

The following communities have collected the following revenue for the first half of 1971: Buffalo Grove, $3,496; Palatine, $26,192; Rolling Meadows, $14,620; Wheeling, $13,353; Hanover Park, $13,577, Hoffman Estates, $13,892; Mount Prospect, $21,006; and Streamwood, $5,835.

Electricians, Bell Agree

Illinois Bell Telephone and Local 811, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (AFL-CIO), have agreed on a three-year contract

The agreement provides pay increases up to $47 50 a week over the next two years Illinois Bell estimates that the improvements in wages and benefits in the new contract will total 16 per cent the first year and about 31 per cent over the three years of the contract.

Local 811 represents about 1,700 Illinois Bell employes throughout the company, primarily clerical people in the comptrollers and secretaries' departments and the mail district of the administrative services department

The present contract with Local 811 expired July 17. The membership has been working on a day-to-day extension of the contract since.

The new contract provides immediate wage increases ranging from $5 a week, to $18.50 a week at the maximum..

In addition, Local 811 employes working in Chicago will receive a "special city allowance" of $1.40 for each day they work.

At the end of the first and second years of the contract, Local 811 employes will receive basic wage increases of up to $5 a week in 1972 and $5 50 a week in 1973.

UNDER THE new contract, a Chicago processing clerk at the current maximum rate of $118 a week will receive an immediate weekly increase of $18.50 in basic wages, plus the special city allowance of $7 a week. This is an immediate increase of $25.50 a week.

In addition, her increases in basic wages plus the cost-of-living escalator after the first and second years of the contract will mean a total increase of $47.50 a week, boosting her weekly pay to $165.50 after two years.

The new contract will be fully retroactive to last July 18 if ratified by the Local 811 membership by August 16, and will expire on July 27, 1974.

Illinois Bell said the Local 811 contract, plus the agreement reached last week with the Communications Workers of America and similar settlements still being negotiated with its other unions, will increase company expense about 200 million over the next three years.

Area Driver Testing Center Plans Renewed

Plans recently have been resurrected for opening of a driver's license testing center to serve the Northwest suburbs, according to the secretary of state's office, but little progress has been made.

Vince Toulen, administrator in the Motor Vehicle Registration Division of the office, said last week that the search for a site recently was renewed after about a year's delay.

In the spring of 1970, plans were announced by the late Paul Powell, then secretary of state, for a testing center on an undisclosed site in Arlington Heights. The plan later was abandoned because local officials feared it would create traffic congestion, officials said.

Toulen said his office recently began reexamining the area to identify possible sites.

He said the office is seeking an open site in an area that would accommodate the traffic generated by a testing center. After the location is found it will be necessary to secure an appropriation from the legislature to acquire the land and construct a building, he said.

Just Politics

by Bob Lahey

U.S. Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-13th, has joined an effort to outlaw the use of union dues for support of political candidates.

Crane recently testified before the elections subcommittee of the Committee on House Administration, conducting hearings on proposed campaign reforms.

He asked that the subcommittee incorporate into reform legislation language of a bill he introduced earlier this year in the House of Representatives, which would prohibit taking funds from compulsory dues payments for political contributions.

He told the subcommittee that financial contributions by organized labor totaled more than $3 million last year in campaigns for the House and Senate. The highest publicly known contribution, Crane said, was the $104,150 received by Sen. John Tunney, D-Calif. He pointed out, however, that the total may be higher than the $3 million acknowledged by labor unions.

CRANE'S MAIN objection was that while an individual member may be opposed to the candidate supported by his labor organization, the leadership may use funds he is forced to pay to further the election of that candidate.

He told the subcommittee that union officials spent an estimated $60 million on the 1968 presidential campaign of Hubert H. Humphrey while surveys showed that 44 per cent of the union members were opposed to him.

"In other words," he declared, "nearly one half of that $60 million came from Americans who opposed the candidate on whom their money was spent."

Crane hinted that he would seek to force a record vote on the floor of the House on the issue.

He said if his amendment was not accepted by the committee, he intends "to join with a number of my colleagues in an effort to get the full membership of Congress to consider the provision on the floor of the Congress."

He added, "A record vote on this important first amendment issue would be most interesting."

ACCORDING TO the National Right to Work Committee, a pre-election survey of congressional candidates last year showed that 138 of those now in the House went on record as opposing use of union dues for political purposes. Of the 297 remaining members, only one — Rep. Parren Mitchell, D-Md. — is on record as favoring such use of dues money, the committee declared.

It pointed out that only 80 votes of the undeclared representatives, combined with those who have indicated their opposition, would be required to pass the legislation favored by Crane.

The Crane legislation already filed in the House specifically would deny the compulsory union shop to any labor organization engaging directly or indirectly in politics. A Senate measure written by Sen. Paul Fannin, R-Ariz., and Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., would deny tax exempt status to any organization using compulsory dues for political purposes.

Time Features 'Jesus Freaks'

by LESTER KINSOLVING

When Billy Graham's recent Chicago Crusade was interrupted by some 100 peace militants who answered his altar call by chanting "Viet Cong will win," the intruders were quickly surrounded and neutralized by ushers and police — and a small army of equally aggressive evangelists known as "Jesus Freaks."

Rev. Lester Kinsolving

This loosely-knit but zealous national organization of fundamentalist youth has since been the subject of TIME magazine cover story — the second time in less than two years that the newsmagazine has featured the aggressive young evangelists. From their mass beach-baptisms to their street corner conversions they are attracting international attention.

The movement originated in Berkeley, Calif., where it is officially known as the Christian World Liberation Front (CWLF) and where it was founded by a former professor of statistics at Penn State University, Jack Sparks.

Sparks, 41, originally arrived on the University of California campus with another theologically conservative organization called Campus Crusade For Christ. But the Crusade evoked full scale editorial wrath from the student newspaper, The Daily Californian, for having awakened numerous students at an early hour with telephoned inquiries such as "Have you found Christ?"

NEITHER EDITORIAL nor verbal denunciations deterred Sparks, who proceeded to launch CWLF, which apparently glories in the bizarre (but undeniably newsworthy) epithet of "Jesus Freaks."

Among other activities of CWLF is the production of a number of publications, one of which has the very contemporary title of "Right On." Among other notable passages, this journal has advised its readers that:

"Sex is meant to be a super, far-out experience. Sex brings a man and a woman together, because God created us to get together in this way. A man and a woman fit together . . . this is proof that God designed them to love one another."

A further evidence that the organization's amalgamation of Hard Shell and hippie can produce some grotesque results is seen in the Right On explanation of Adam and Eve, Original Sin and The Fall of Man:

"Eve went on a big ego trip and Adam bit the same apple . . . Well, the first thing they did was, they put on their clothes . . . their opposites got out of alignment since their vibes turned towards themselves. Their egos repelled each other. Man and woman have never been together since."

During an interview at CWLF's Berkeley headquarters earlier this year, Joel Peck, one of the orgnization's full-time leaders, told this writer:

"MOST OF US has went to college."

He said that he had attended John Brown University at Siloam Springs, Ark., as well as the Colorado Institute of Art. He went on to explain that while CWLF is non-denominational, "There is only one way to Heaven — through Christ!"

All those who die without being "Born Again" are forever lost and will burn in Hell through all eternity, he solemnly affirmed.

When asked if he believes that Almighty God really desires such a terrible eternity for such people as Socrates, Peck replied:

"I don't know Socrates very well."

Such a title as Jesus Freaks may have some scriptural precedence — the First Epistle to The Corinthians makes reference to "fools for Christ's sake." But more than one thinking Christian will wonder if all foolishness can reasonably be claimed as being for Christ's sake. (As the late and great theologian Rheinhold Niebuhr once put it: "Some people are just damn fools, period.")

And desipte the volume of publicity being afforded this collection of "Jesus-Jesus" chanters, previous years have seen TIME covers devoted to other fast growing and spectacular fads, for which large numbers of Americans seem almost anxious to go annually ape. These include astrology as well as the noticeably short-lived movement which contended that God is dead.

Volunteer Service Bureau Sets 'All-Pro Sessions'

An "All-Pro Session" for agencies which use volunteers placed by the Volunteer Service Bureau of Northwest Cook County will be held Tuesday.

Six speakers will present talks about the use of volunteers, followed by a general discussion session. The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. in room 214A at Harper College, Roselle and Algonquin rds., Palatine

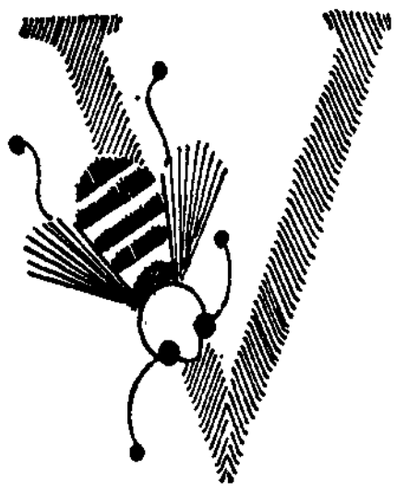
The board of the volunteer bureau decided to hold the session to allow discussion between the agencies which use volunteers and the bureau which places them. Letters of invitation have been sent to various agencies, including school and park districts, social service agencies, homes for the elderly, schools for handicapped children, hospitals and others

Each speaker will present a five-minute talk. Speakers include Roderick McLennan, president of the volunteer bureau and assistant superintendent of Dist. 214.

Other speakers will be Mary Stitt, principal of Dist. 25's Olive School in Arlington Heights; and Winnie Stewart, director of volunteer services at the Lutheran Home for the Aged, Arlington Heights

More speakers will be Virgil Fuchs, social service director of the Lutheran Home for the Aged; Dennis Olenik, head librarian at John Hersey High School, Arlington Heights; and William Hastert, sociology teacher at Hersey High School.

State Rep. Eugenia Chapman (D-Arlington Heights), is also expected to speak at the meeting. Mrs. Chapman is a member of the Status of Women Commission of Illinois, serving as the chairman on volunteerism.



THE VOLUNTEER BUREAU'S SYMBOL

In the invitation letter, agencies were asked to consider questions before attending the session. Among the items which will be discussed are gaining the maximum benefits from the use of volunteers, recruiting men to serve as volunteers and receiving the maximum benefits from using the volunteer bureau.

People attending the session will include representatives from both agencies which now use volunteers placed by the bureau and agencies which are interested in the bureau's work.

New School Chief Faces Challenge

Before Richard Martwick is sworn into office today as Cook County School Superintendent, he might pause and consider the records of three other men who have held top-level elective educational offices in Cook County and in Illinois.

The three are Robert Hanrahan, Michael Bakalis and Ray Page. Martwick, as he has waited and prepared to become County Superintendent, is aware of their records. They have set both positive and negative standards for educational leadership.

Hanrahan is the man Martwick will replace as County Superintendent and who will be serving as regional commissioner in the educational wing of the U. S. Health Education and Welfare Dept.

It would be difficult for any man to follow in Hanrahan's footsteps. In a just-released annual report from the office, the list of achievements in the past year alone is impressive.

In 1970, the office was decentralized. Student and teacher forums were held. Inspections for the Life Safety Code were conducted throughout the county. A pilot program for drug education was developed. The General Educational Development (GED) testing program was expanded into the suburbs.

Hanrahan's handling of the office typifies a "leadership" concept of what the office should be doing — a concept which, when mixed with attention to the needs of local districts, will make the office a center of leadership.

Bakalis is the man who has served seven months as State Superintendent of Education. He will be Illinois' last elected superintendent, as the post becomes appointive in 1975.

Bakalis has just concluded in Chicago a series of public hearings designed to lead to a "master plan" for elementary and secondary education. Perhaps the most impressive feature of the hearings was Bakalis' attentiveness to the voice of the public, expressed through college professors and housewives.

Throughout the hearings there was a sense of welcome to the "little guy" who wanted to talk about education. If Martwick can encourage such a sense of openness within the County office, he'll encourage a public confidence which very few public officials possess at the present time.

Last, there is Page, whose eight years as State Superintendent were marred by scandal and public distrust. Through blatant political favortism and a callous disregard for the people of Illinois, Page demonstrated how a public office can be downgraded by the kind of man who runs it.

Where Martwick will fit on the scale will, of course, depend on his performance during the next four years. It will depend on the personnel with which he surrounds himself, and on the ideas he can bring to the post.

One thing is certain — the problems and challenges will not lessen during the next four years. For example, suburban districts are feeling an increasing need to cope with problems through legislation. How Martwick's office works to gain that legislation will be of interest to suburban districts.

Vocational education is another area which requires leadership in developing cooperation among school districts. Martwick's office has an opportunity to encourage that cooperation.

The challenges are endless. Martwick will find himself both listening to and leading school districts in Cook County. His job will not be an easy one — but the education of thousands of children depends on his performance. We wish him the best of luck in the job.

New Crystal Ball

Like Vietnam, poverty and pollution, the computer is an easy target for criticism these days. Thus when man does not bite computer, that's news.

The greatest value of the computer lies in its ability to let men prepare for the future, says Marshall S. Armstrong, president of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants.

"In the past," he says, "when we engaged in planning, the human labor required to deal with the interactions of just a few variables was monumental. Now we can provide as many combinations of as many factors as anyone cares to read and ponder."

The ability to play the game of "What If?" is essential, he points out.

What if the economy turns down, or up? What if the cost of labor or money changes? What if consumer tastes shift from product A to product B?

If we can specify these "What ifs," the computer can help us answer them, measuring and comparing the impact of one variable upon another.

The future. That, after all, is what human endeavor has always been directed toward.

A Main-Chance Player

Mayor Daley MAY Go For Muskie

by BRUCE BOISSATE

Among leading Illinois Democrats, it's Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine for the 1972 presidential nomination.

This summary judgment covers both the regulars and most of the irregulars. The latter, it is said, "want to win." And they see Muskie doing just that against President Nixon.

The New Left in this state is dismissed as very small and inconsequential even by some pretty ardent liberals. By their reckoning, candidates like Sens. George McGovern and Fred Harris can't hope to pick off more than a handful of the 1970 Illinois votes in the 1972 Convention next July.

Chicago's Mayor Richard Daley is, of course, the key factor in determining how the great bulk of those votes will go. Despite anything you may have read, no one knows which way he is leaning.

Lately, daring chaps have been dropping knowing hints that he might favor either Ted Kennedy or Sen. Henry Jackson of Washington. Sand in the eyes.

Daley is a main-chance player. In 1972 he wants to hold key county offices like state's attorney, and he wants to oust Republican Gov. Richard Ogilvie, who is vulnerable after putting over an income tax.

If Muskie continues in polls to run ahead of Nixon, if he builds on his lead position by taking key primaries, high sources here think Daley will set his course clearly.

In view of one leading Illinois Democrat, Daley's fabled affinity for the Kennedys is being misread in the current situation. Many in the party here are said to have grave misgivings over Ted Kennedy this time. They are rooted in the 1969 Chappaquiddick bridge incident in Massachusetts. Their fear is of the unknown.

Daley is aware of these fears. Moreover, even though he tried belatedly to get Ted to run in 1968, he is said not to feel as close to him as he did to his two assassinated older brothers.

The 1968 nominee, Sen. Hubert Humphrey, is alleged by hardnosed appraisers to be dead in Illinois for 1972. The irregulars still have not forgotten his link to LBJ and the war and the Chicago convention debacle. The regulars are also disenchanted.

They take their lead from Daley himself, who got into a gumball-throwing contest with Humphrey over who did what to whom in 1968.

Humphrey said Daley and his minions gave him something less than total support in that campaign. (He lost Illinois by only a couple points.) Daley retorted with a purple-faced blast in which he said Humphrey was a lousy candidate. It is hard to see him going big for Hubert another time.

Sen. Edmund Muskie

Daley's reported interest in hawkish Henry Jackson is just funny talk. Akin to that stuff about his wanting Johnson in 1960. He might like the idea of Jackson. But Daley lives in the real world, where you do the things that get sheriffs and state's attorneys elected.

Illinois has a presidential primary, presently set for next March 21, right after New Hampshire and Florida. The date may be changed in a legislative session this fall, but it won't make much difference.

The primary offers an optional presidential preference test. But the results are not binding on the delegates elected, and right now no candidate is talking of making the run for, at best, a mere psychological boost.

The Daley-controlled Illinois Democratic Committee supports proposals which would allow delegates to indicate their candidate preference on the primary ballot. If elected, they would be bound to that preference when they vote in convention.

The appearance here, however, is illusory. Daley expects Ogilvie to veto any such primary law changes. It could, then, be Daley's "A" for effort in the direction of freer delegate choice, with nothing lost in the end.

In Illinois, party reform is a wave shattering on Chicago's Lake Michigan breakwater. It will be Daley as usual next year — and probably Daley for Muskie.

Ogilvie's Bond Plan Is 'Bargain'

Your recent editorial, "Highway Debt Socks Taxpayer," contained a number of inaccuracies and misleading impressions to which I would like to respond.

Your editorial assumes, along with the Lieutenant Governor, that the $4.8 billion freeway system would be constructed entirely with bond financing. Even a cursory reading of the Highway Study Commission proposals — which is the origin of our plan — indicates that this has never been intended or seriously considered. In its 1969 report, the bipartisan commission proposed a $2 billion bond financing program, with the remaining $2.8 billion to be financed through other existing state and federal highway revenues.

Assuming $2 billion in bonds were sold over the next 10 years, interest payments would total about $1.5 billion at present interest rates. It is also worth noting that Illinois sold $100 million in anti-pollution bonds in early June at a 4.92 interest rate, considerably less than the 6 or 7 per cent figure cited frequently by the Lieutenant Governor and repeated in your editorial. Barring unforeseen economic developments, there is every reason to believe that we will be able to market the highway bonds at a similarly low rate when the highway bonds are sold in the near future.

You have also questioned the wisdom of debt financing. Considering the present 10 per cent or more annual increase in construction costs — in some areas 17 to 20 per cent — a 5 or even 6 per cent interest rate appears small indeed. The simple fact is that bond financing will save the taxpayers of Illinois hundreds of of millions of dollars — in addition to providing at an early date roads which are desperately needed.

I would remind you that without the highway bond issues of the 1920's and 1930's, many of the most critical routes serving your own areas may not have been constructed in time to allow for the planning and orderly growth of the suburban area. Among the roads financed by those earlier bonds are Algonquin Road, Northwest Highway, Rand Road and Golf Road.

Your editorial overlooks the tremendous advantages which will be gained from the development of a freeway system. Our studies indicate that urban motorists save about 4.3 cents per mile using the freeways, while the saving averages 2.6 cents a mile in less congested downstate areas. The savings in time are nearly incalculable, but it has been estimated that the Kennedy Expressway alone saves Chicago area motorists some 1.7 million hours a year. A north-south freeway in western Illinois, for example, will save an hour and a half on a drive from St. Louis to the Quad Cities, a distance of some 225 miles.

Most important of all the arguments in favor of the freeway system is that it saves lives. The statistics leave no room for doubt on this point. The safety records indicate that limited-access highways of the kind being planned are three or four times safer than the average Illinois road or street. We know, for example that the existing 60-mile expressway system in the Chicago area has resulted in a saving of some 110 lives every year.

Governor Ogilvie's transportation bond plan is a bargain for the people of this state, and it merits their strong support.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Whatever the intention of the Highway Study Commission, the Illinois General Assembly under the new state constitution has authority to finance the highway program through revenue bonds. It was at this possibility that the Herald editorial was directed. While it is hoped that the lowest possible interest rate may be obtained, the legislature has authorized payment of up to 7 per cent. The figure used by the lieutenant governor and quoted in the editorial was based on an interest rate of 6 per cent.)

Direct Sales Personnel Are Defended

Re: July 7, 1971, Article on Legislation to Limit Solicitors.

In your reportorial zeal to provide your readers with facts on a proposed ordinance limiting door-to-door selling in Arlington Heights, it appears that cleverness was more important than accuracy in your opening statement. The factual information was prefaced with a blanket indictment of all door-to-door salesmen as "those pesky pitchmen who swarm through the suburbs by the hundreds."

As a corporation which has made it possible for over 150,000 distributors of Amway products in North America, and now Australia, to become involved in free enterprise and enjoy the profits therefrom, we feel that this general attack is unwarranted and damaging to all ethical members of the direct selling industry.

It is also our suggestion that the enclosed booklets offer more concrete protections for the consumer than the restrictive legislation pending. From review, it appears that the registered, fingerprinted, Police Department accredited salesman of "moral character, honesty and integrity" would still be allowed, between the hours of 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., to misrepresent himself or his product or service if he was so inclined and if the consumer did not have adequate guidelines to aid in her decision to purchase at her door. The nine points enumerated in BE WISE might provide the basis for a follow-up article aimed at consumer information rather than review of restrictive legislation.

For your information, we are enclosing background on Amway and also refer to your local Better Business Bureau for additional facts relative to your area.

If you should desire additional facts about Amway or the direct selling industry, feel free to get in touch.

Business Today

by DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

NEW YORK (UPI) —What does it take to buy a house?

It is surprising how many young families don't know — not even the basic fact that a cash down payment is necessary.

"Many ambitious young American families do not have the necessary cash to make a down payment on a home because no one ever has told them that's what it takes," said Jackson W. Goss, president of Investors Mortgage Insurance Co . Boston.

Goss said: "We have found young people in all parts of the country who are literally starving for information on how to take the first step into home ownership "

These young people, he said, have been attending one-night Home Buyer's School sessions in cities across the country, sponsored by local groups as part of a new "Step One" program launched by Investors Mortgage

The company is a private mortgage insurance organization which works with lenders, insuring the top 20 per cent of high-ratio home loans so that young families with good prospects but small cash resources can purchase homes with minimum 10 per cent down payment.

"Step One," Goss explained, "is a program designed to bring families, mortgage lenders and builders or Relators together in a realistic approach to home ownership "

The family which wants a house is encouraged to make the commitment, to save toward a specific goal over a specific period of time The lender, because of the new account, has more funds to lend and, perhaps, a long-term customer to boot A participating builder, with a commitment for a house, can plan his construction schedule accordingly.

For example, Goss said, a family in the market for a house meets with a builder and decides on a $30,000 house. Lacking the minimum 10 per cent, or $3 000, required as a cash down payment, the family opens a Step One account with the lending institution which will make the mortgage loan. At $100 a month, for instance, the family, in 30 months, can have $3,000 plus interest ready for the down payment when the builder, aware of the schedule, has the house completed.

Goss said there is no strict time limit on a Step One account; a family can save according to its means — 18 months, 24 months, 30, 36 or even 48.

Naturally the question arises as to the price of the house over an extended period of time. The builder, Goss said, generally is not committed to a specific price and, with rising costs, allowance should be made in savings programs for a possible increase in the down payment.

Goss said Investors Mortgage, to implement the new program and speed its introduction, is working with lenders, builders and Relators in all parts of the country to conduct informative Home Buyer's educational sessions.

"These one-night seminars, at which local people talk to local people, are proving very popular," he said. "Thousands of young families are having their questions answered on how to buy homes. Builders are selling houses and lending institutions are gaining new depositors."

The schools were started after a test run earlier this year in Cincinnati. Investors Mortgage, along with the Cincinnati Enquirer, the Home Builders Association of Greater Cincinnati and the Southwestern Ohio Savings & Loan League, held the first of the sessions.

"We were literally amazed at what took place," Goss said "Seating for 800 persons had been arranged; we really expected only 400 to 500 to show up. Instead, 1,200 people turned out."

Goss said the average age of the audience was 30 — "and about 15 per cent of the women present were noticeably pregnant " He said: "These 1,200 people were vitally interested in finding out what it akes to buy a house. Every available piece of printed material was snapped up and we thought the question-and-answer part of the program would go on all night."

The Home Buyer's School in Portland recently drew the same kind of response, he said.

"One young Portland couple, with two children, really came prepared with questions," Goss said. "They asked about closing costs, interest rates on savings accounts, mortgage loan costs, building costs and time requirements."

After the meeting, Goss said, the husband said it was the first time they'd ever heard anybody "really say it takes cash to buy a house."

"We didn't know the difference between conventional and government-insured loans. And it was the first time I ever had heard closing costs explained in a manner so I could understand them."

The man's wife, Goss said, added: "I thought you could buy a house like you buy a car or a stove — just go down to the bank and get a loan. Boy, was I surprised . . ."

Personal Finance

by CARLTON SMITH

Most homeowners, probably, believe that the insurance on the house will cover any amount of damage — from fire, say, or a tornado — up to the face amount of the policy It isn't necessarily so, and often there's a hazardous gap between what the coverage seems to be, and what it actually is.

There's the recent case of a printing salesman who'd bought a $25,000 home in a midwestern suburb 10 years ago. It was insured to its full amount (he thought) with a $25,000 policy A fire early this summer caused $10,000 damage to building and contents. No argument about that, the insurance adjuster agreed that replacement and repair would cost $10 000 Yet the owner's compensation was only $7,500 Why?

In one word inflation. He was underinsured because, in his area, building costs had risen some 40 per cent in the past 10 years. To replace the house that he'd paid $25,000 for, 10 years ago, would today cost $35,000. Still, he did have a $25,000 policy Why wouldn't it take care of $10,000 worth of damage?

Homeowners policies have an "80 per cent rule " If a house is insured for at least 80 per cent of its replacement value, you get full replacement in case of damage — replacement with "material of like find and quality." If you're insured for less than 80 per cent, your claim is adjusted on the basis of depreciation.

IN THE CASE of the printing salesman, his house had a current replacement cost of $35,000. He needed a $28,000 policy to come within the 80 per cent rule. Since he was underinsured by $3,000, the value of the property destroyed by fire was reduced by 10 years' depreciation, which was put at 25 per cent. Thus the loss, by this calculation, was not $10,000 but $7,500.

Building costs — which determine replacement costs — have risen precipitously in the past couple of decades. Generally, they've more than doubled since 1950. Older homes are prone to be more underinsured, therefore, than those of recent vintage. But many newer houses have rapidly slipped below 80 per cent coverage.

One recent survey, says the "Journal of American Insurance," showed that 55 per cent of all insured homes were, by the 80 per cent rule, underinsured. And among these underinsured homes, coverage averaged only 54.2 per cent of the replacement value.

HOW CAN YOU tell whether you're underinsured? First, you need to know how the value of your property divides up between land and dwelling. You can generally get this from local tax records.

The increase in replacement cost of the dwelling can be estimated with the "appraisal kits" that many insurance companies supply on request. At their simplest they give you a multiplier based on age of the house. For one built in 1959, for example, the multiplier might be 1.50. Multiply the original cost of the house by this and you approximate today's replacement cost. Some of these "kits" take into account differences in geographic areas. One multiplier would be shown for a house in Philadelphia, another and lower one for a house of the same vintage in Scranton, Pa.

Or ask your local insurance man to help you calculate current replacement value. He should be happy to cooperate. The chances are 55-45 that you ought to buy more insurance.

Motorola Announces Record Sales

Motorola Inc. announced record sales for the second quarter and first half. Second quarter sales were $219,260,709, up 15 per cent compared to $190,304,887 last year.

Earnings for the second quarter were $7,927,130, or 59 cents per share, up 12 per cent from $7,105,000, or 53 cents per share reported in the same period of last year.

First half sales of $418,842,274 were up 6 per cent from last year's first half. Earnings for the first half were $13,336,351, or $1.00 per share, up 3 per cent over last year.

In announcing these results, Robert W. Galvin, chairman of the Chicago-based electronics firm, said "in prior reports we indicated our expectations of a slowly improving domestic economy through 1971, with a resultant improvement in many of our businesses. Results from operations in the second quarter were consistent with our overall business plan."

Galvin said he anticipates the domestic economy will continue in the present pattern of slow but steady improvement throughout the balance of 1971. This improvement, along with effective cost controls, should continue to contribute to improving results for the company through the remainder of the year, he said.

The company's communications division's sales increased over both this year's first quarter and the second quarter of last year. It is estimated the division will maintain its annual growth rate in excess of 10 per cent. The division's earnings increased substantially over the first quarter and were moderately larger than the second quarter of last year. New order input was over 20 per cent greater than 1970's second quarter.

Sales of the semiconductor products division were lower than the same period of 1970 but were higher than the first quarter of 1971. Earnings were reduced from last year's second quarter; however, bookings and backlog are maintaining favorable trends.

In the quarter, the consumer products division recorded its highest factory dollar sales since 1966, increasing more than 100 per cent over the same period in 1970. Field unit sales of color television in the second quarter were 97 per cent ahead of the same period in 1970.

The government electronics division continued its excellent performance with sales, earnings and bookings up over the first half of last year, Galvin said. New business bookings which contributed to the division's improved position in the second quarter included the flight data subsystem for this nation's Mariner/Venus/Mercury scientific space probe.

Sales of the automotive products division established new records for the second quarter as well as the first half. Earnings increased at approximately the same rate for both periods. Entertainment product sales increased to Chrysler, Ford, and Volkswagen.

Borg-Warner Earnings Increase 10 Per Cent

Borg-Warner Corp.'s net earnings increased nearly 10 per cent in the second quarter of the fiscal year, marking the first time since the fourth quarter of 1969 that net earnings topped year-earlier totals.

Record sales were achieved in both the quarter and the half. For the quarter, net sales reached $291,912, up from $289,548 a year ago. Earnings in the quarter were $12,349, or 64 cents a share, compared to $11,257, or 58 cents a share, last year. Six-month sales were $570,103; earnings for the period were $21,967, or $1.14 a share.

The increases resulted from continued strong performance of overseas operations, the York air conditioning division and Borg-Warner Acceptance Corporation, according to chairman Robert S. Ingersoll. The chemicals and plastics group, which was down much of last year, also had substantial gains due to a recovery in the demand for its Cycolac brand ABS thermoplastics.

The disposition of unprofitable operations has helped earnings by eliminating losses incurred in previous years.

A lower tax rate due to the elimination of the federal income tax surcharge, which expired on June 30 last year, also contributed to the improvement in net earnings.

First half earnings were affected by strikes in seven of our divisions. Higher costs as a result of labor negotiations during the remainder of 1971 are expected.

The outlook for the rest of the year is tempered by the fact that several of Borg-Warner's major markets have not yet recovered from their sluggish performance in 1970. However, Borg-Warner expects the continuing upturn in the U.S. economy to help it achieve higher sales and earnings in 1971.

The corporation has a research facility in Des Plaines.

Area Educators Are Impressed

'Learn By Doing' Is English System

PEBBLES FROM the garden are considered an educational tool in England, so teachers often have to go out collecting them. Mrs. G. A. McElroy, principal at Kensington School in Arlington Heights, was one of three area educators who spent a month this summer observing and teaching in British primary schools.

by JUDY NAJOLIA

Five young boys learn math by making peppermint candy.

A group of nine-year-olds move the classroom to the battlefield where they reenact the Battle of Hastings.

Education that uses society and the environment to make academic subjects like math and history relevant has been developing in England since World War II.

Three area educators, intrigued by the British primary school system, spent three weeks in England this summer observing and teaching as part of a National Education Association (NEA) seminar.

"This type of relevant education has developed in England primarily because of the war and lack of money for sophisticated educational materials," Kathryn McElroy, principal of Kensington School in Arlington Heights, says. Mrs. McElroy, a Palatine resident, is the wife of former Dist. 211 Supt. G. A. McElroy.

CHILDREN WERE evacuated from London when the bombing started in World War II. In make-shift schools in small villages, cellars and caves children learned to count with pebbles and berries and measure with sand. After the war, little money was available for educational materials so the environment continued to be a teacher's source of learning tools.

Mrs. McElroy, Lynn Enright, a teacher in her school, and Helen Castor, wife of former Dist. 15 Supt. E. S. Castor, principal of Westgate School, watched children learn about nature, measurement tables, health and a bit of cooking by picking berries and making strawberry jam in school.

"There are many similarities between the British and American schools and I think we are on the threshold of the 'children learn by doing theory.' That's why I went to England to see how they do it," Mrs. McElroy said.

One big difference is the British philosophy of accepting a child where he is: "They are sold on individual instruction. A teacher may have a larger class, but each child is working on his own. The teacher is supervising."

Mrs. McElroy followed one boy through a day of school: "Stephen came in in the morning and looked at the board for the week's assignments. He decided to do math first to get it out of the way."

EVERY CHILD in England has permission to move around the school building as he pleases. After he completed his math, Stephen went to the cafeteria for his free carton of milk.

During a specified time each day, each classroom teacher has access to the activity room: "They call physical education 'movement.' It's a time when activities in drama, rhythm and music take place."

Hot lunches are served in British schools. After lunch, Stephen worked on making costumes for the Battle of Hastings.

"He had to research the costumes and write a paper on them. This afternoon he was making the costumes as well. Stephen chose his project, but while he worked on it he was learning social studies, history, reading, penmanship, writing and research techniques, and he was enjoying it."

If he needed a library book, Stephen could go to sign it out whenever he needed it.

"There's an openness and a conviction among the teachers that their way is right. They teach the child, not the subject and accept the child for what he is, not what they hope he can do."

ALL CHILDREN move on to the next grade level at the end of the year. Their new teacher must work with the children at each child's learning level.

"When you walk into a school there is a low hum because the children are constantly moving about. As far as discipline is concerned, the teachers are forthright. They don't cajole or coax. If a child is misbehaving, they come right up to him and ask him what's going on."

Children talk and learn from each other in school: "Then if they want a quiet time, there are nooks they can go to and do something undisturbed. I'd like to try this in Kensington School. We know children need some time to themselves and this may be the way to do it," Mrs. McElroy said.

Curriculum is decided by the headmaster or headmistress — the equivalent of a principal: "If the head decided to teach Greek and he can find a teacher, he can have Greek taught. Through hiring, the head puts his philosophy of education to work in his school."

HEADS RECEIVE a lump sum of money from a county school board which collects taxes, but the "county authority" as it is called, does not decide what is taught.

In British schools, the classroom is informal: "You don't see rows of desks and never does a teacher lecture to the class," Mrs. McElroy said.

"All the children aren't working in the same workbook because in England they don't have the money or the sophisticated publishers to get them. Each child works at his own speed on his subjects. For some, one type of exercise is needed, for other children, a different type of drill may be needed."

MRS. McELROY believes childhood is not a race: "It's a journey through life and we shouldn't try to hasten children through it. Some move more slowly than others and we have to accept them for that. In the British primary schools, children are happy and productive."

Such a philosophy of education can be used in American elementary schools: "At Kensington School, we are beginning to expand. One of the first grade classes made breakfast for the mothers and the children learned about nutrition and balanced meals."

Though she would like to use the British educational philosophy, Mrs. McElroy said culture would prevent Americans from adopting the British classroom.

"In England, mothers do not work with children. They may help the teacher, but the British believe teaching is a highly specialized profession and being a mother is very specialized and the child should have the best of the two. Mothers do not belong at school."

The English school philosophy "makes sense and is relevant," which is why Mrs. McElroy thinks it could be used in the United States. This fall at Kensington School, she will begin to apply what she learned in England to her Arlington Heights school.

Court Rulings On Rights Bring Dress Changes

Attendance at a public school is not an automatic waiver of a student's constitutional rights, says a National Education Association (NEA) research bulletin citing rulings of some courts in recent years regarding regulation of student dress

The late 60's saw a change in the courts' attitude that mere anticipation of disruption of the learning process was sufficient cause for regulation of student appearance. Now rulings tend to favor the idea that students are free to dress as they please as long as there is no actual disruption of order in the classroom or impingement on the freedom of other students.

The effect on individual schools has been the gradual elimination of involved "tape-measure" dress codes concerning hair and skirt lengths and other manners of dress.

Instead, many schools are adopting general guidelines involving a minimum of restrictions. The principle in each of these statements is similar to that expressed in "The Reasonable Exercise of Authority," a booklet released by the National Association of Secondary School Principals in 1969: "There should be no restriction on a student's hair style or his manner of dressing unless these present a 'clear and present' danger to the student's health and safety, cause an interference with work, or create classroom or school disorder."

Many school officials seem to take a good-natured view of the situation, as long as no disruption of school order is involved, resigning to the fact that there is little chance they can effectively control fashion trends anyway.

Some schoolmen even go so far as to say that they don't object to more "extreme" styles such as shorts or "hot pants" as they think these are preferable to faded and tattered dungarees.

OTHERS OFFER the opinion that since the school's purpose is to educate, it should not be up to administrators to assume the parents' responsibility and decide what their children should wear to school or how long they should wear their hair.

These attitudes are vastly different from a typical view expressed by a high school principal in the September, 1961, issue of the NEA Journal:

"The teenager's dress is reflected in his entire personality . . . The teenager who wears appropriate school clothes tends to act less like a child and more like a responsible adult . . . Most educators agree that the schools have a responsibility for providing guidance in personal dress and grooming."

The question of the relationship between dress and values, attitudes and behavior, has been argued back and forth by students, educators, and parents alike. Many students, educators, and parents challenge the view that clothes directly influence a student's behavior and attitude and contend a student's manner of dress is simply a manifestation of his already formed values.

Some students will dispute even this last point, saying that there is no relation at all between their social and political thought and their choice of clothes. They insist that their manner of dress reflects nothing more than convenience, it being easier to grow a beard than to shave, cheaper to have long hair than to get a haircut, and more comfortable and more practical to wear well-broken-in blue jeans than to "get dressed up."

Other observers have denounced school dress codes as efforts by officials to force conformity on students in the belief that regulated dress would lead to regulated behavior and even regulated thought.

A POLL CONDUCTED in May, 1969, by the NEA Research Division concluded that "more than 85 per cent of the nation's public school teachers think their schools should have authority to regulate the wearing apparel and personal grooming of pupils . . . Less than 7 per cent believe that the school should not regulate student dress or grooming."

The poll indicated that although a majority of the teachers favored school regulation of student dress, most didn't find these matters to be major problems in their schools. But that was before the impact of the trend toward assertion of students' right to "freedom of appearance" and ellimination of dress codes was felt.

The majority of the students in the nation's school are pleased with this change in official administrative policy. They have long contended that their education would be better served if the controversy surrounding what they wear were directed toward more important and timely issues within the schools.

But the impact of this new attitude goes far beyond the question of appropriate school dress, and the students realize this.

In recent years, our society has become rights-conscious and students are a very active part. After years of striving to be recognized as individuals, they are seeing signs that "The System" is waking up to their rights as students.

School dress may be a minor point, but it shows that the courts and school administrators are beginning to realize that students, too, are protected as "persons" under the U.S. Constitution.

Long Grove: New Shops To See And Browse

NEW BUILDINGS are going up and old buildings are being renovated for additional shops in Long Grove. The Cherished Child, a children's apparel shop, will be moving into larger quarters once the work on this house is completed. More new shops will be opening in Long Grove in the next several weeks.

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Two sisters, Mrs. Lorna Gerbing of Rolling Meadows and Mrs. Jean Gray of Arlington Heights, had always dreamed of opening a shop together.

When the opportunity arose to start a business in Long Grove, the two, whose families were now more or less grown, jumped at the chance.

Since Mrs. Gerbing had previously worked in a bath shop, they decided to pool their sales talents and techniques into a bathroom boutique. The Merry Mermaid opened its doors to customers in April.

It is one of a handful of new small shops that have opened in Long Grove since March. Many have opened in just the last month.

LOCATED ON ONE edge of the antiquated village is a new art gallery that specializes in 19th century oils and watercolors. The Sean O'Kelleys are the proprietors of the Left Bank.

Works by contemporary, graphic and local artists are also represented in the small shop that doubles as a home for the O'Kelleys, who reside above the gallery.

Sean is himself an artist and does portraits and other paintings upon consignment. Having managed other art galleries around the Chicago area, he decided it was time to open his own.

Next door on Old McHenry Road is another art shop, the Famous French Gallery which just opened in mid-July. It is owned and operated by Jim Determann of Elk Grove Village.

WORKS FROM 10 European countries are represented in the gallery, and the hand-carved frames are all imported from either Mexico, Germany or Holland.

And, in addition to the stacks of paintings, Determann has set up his own July Christmas. An artificial tree is decorated with small iced ornaments while various other holiday trimmings are displayed in the front window.

Able to buy Christmas items in February at a very low price, Determann can then turn around and offer a good price to his customers. Who cares if it is still summer?

"Christmas in July? Well, I just felt like doing it," he commented.

IN THE SAME building housing The Merry Mermaid, is Ginny's Gift Shop, 248 Old McHenry Road. The proprietor is Mrs. Virginia E. Moore of Skokie. Her small store contains mostly kitchen accessories and small gift items.

A little more unusual for the area is a new import Mexican shop called the Casita Verde which is owned and operated by four couples. It opened two weeks ago.

"We've all been friends for a long time," said Mrs. Allen Busa of Glenview of her business partners. "We like Mexico and enjoy the products. We thought it was a shame that residents here couldn't get the same merchandise."

The other couples involved with Casita Verde include the Richard Marubios and the Michael Promens, all of Mount Prospect, and the Thomas Longways of Buffalo Grove.

THE COUPLES FIRST opened their store in Half Day in November because, at that time, there was nothing available in Long Grove. They moved the shop as soon as space was available.

Across the street is a shop called The Arts. It is stocked with books, cards, stationary and odd crafts. It opened the first of April with Mrs. Marcia Berga of Mundelein managing the counter. "I always wanted to open a shop and I love books so . . . that's how it happened," she smiled.

JUST OPENED SINCE last week is the Village Chandlery. It is stocked with candles and all kinds of candle accessories. Eleven vats will soon be filled with different colored dyes to allow customers to color their candles to private tastes.

New shops to be opened this month are the Needle Case, which will sell needlepoint and crewel supplies and also offer needlecraft lessons, and The Cellar Winery, which will include on-the-spot wine tasting.

Both stores will be located on the corner of Long Grove and Old McHenry Roads. The Needle Case is moving in upstairs in the Farmside Store building and the winery is going in downstairs. A bakery specializing in homemade bread will also be located in the basement of the same building.

ANOTHER NEW SHOP to be opened the latter part of the summer is an extension of the traveling Hang It All Boutique, the creation of Mrs. Carol Gillis and Mrs. Nancy Haines, both of Palatine. The shop will feature handiwork by area craftsmen, providing a stationary outlet for the two women who formerly displayed their collection only at parties in area women's homes.

Those who haven't been to Long Grove for at least a year might find the visit unique all over again.

OPENING THIS SPRING were Ginny's Gift Shop and the Merry Mermaid, a bath boutique. Two local sisters, Mrs. Lorna Gerbing of Rolling Meadows and Mrs. Jean Gray of Arlington Heights opened the bath boutique after considering for many years going into business. "We love it," said Mrs. Gray. "It is really great."

THE SEAN O'KELLEYS exhibit a lot of 19th century oil and watercolors in their recently opened gallery, the Left Bank. Sean is himself an artist and does paintings for people upon consignment. Contemporary work including graphics are also on display in the small shop.

A MEXICAN IMPORT shop, the Casita Verde, has recently opened on Old McHenry Road in Long Grove. The store is owned and managed by four couples.

Californian Is Bride Of Charles R. Opela

Paula Patricia Cooper, descendant of early California settlers, became the bride of Charles Randel Opela of Arlington Heights June 26 in a garden setting reminiscent of the days of her forebears.

The 4 p.m. nuptial mass was performed in the Margaret Fowler Garden at Scripps College, Claremont, Calif., a formal Mexican garden with murals of Mexican artisans and senoritas painted on the tile-covered corridors.

The bride, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Robert Ward Cooper, USN (ret.), is a graduate of Scripps. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Opela, 636 N. Dunton, Arlington Heights.

For her marriage, Paula chose a gown of white delustered satin with sleeves and bodice of re-embroidered Alencon lace Her veil of Brussels lace had been worn by her two sisters. Attached to her cascade of daisies, carnations and ivy was the prayer book carried by her mother and her grandmother when they were wed.

MATRON OF HONOR was the bride's sister, Mrs Harold Payson III of Boston, who wore a Thai silk dress in shades of pink, green and white and carried a basket of carnations, daisies and ivy. Matching flowers were arranged in a cascade at the back of her hair.

Melissa Opela of Arlington Heights, the groom's sister, was bridesmaid. She was gowned identically to the matron of honor with the same basket of flowers and a cascade in her hair.

The bride's cousin, John Johnson of Carmel, Calif., served as altar boy. The groom's brother, Todd, of Arlington Heights, was best man.

The early California theme was carried out in the wedding reception held in the courtyard of the garden. Strolling Mexican musicians entertained the guests with guitar and mandolin music. Pre-wedding festivities in the same theme included the groom's dinner hosted by his parents, a traditional Mexican wedding feast

FOR HER DAUGHTER'S wedding Mrs Cooper was gowned in blue chiffon with lilies of the valley tucked at her waist Mrs Opela wore a yellow and white lace dress and a gardenia.

After a brief stay in Palm Springs, the bridal couple have been touring Mexico. They will return to the Chicago area in late August

The bride, who was educated in Santiago, Chile, Helsinki, Finland; and Paris before her graduation from the Convent of the Sacred Heart at El Cajon, Calif., is employed as an interior designer for John M. Smyth & Co in Evanston.

The bridegroom, a graduate of Arlington High School and the University of Illinois school of music at Champaign-Urbana, works as a professional musician in the Chicago area. He also is continuing his studies at the University of Illinois Circle Campus in Chicago.

Parents Share in Wedding

Their parents played an especially important role when Susan Katherine Niemczyk and Kenneth Earl Newquist were married June 26 in a noon ceremony at Our Lady of the Wayside Church of Arlington Heights.

Mothers of the bridal couple had sewn the dresses of all the members of the bridal party except the bride's gown, which she made herself. The two fathers participated in the ceremony by reading from scripture.

Susan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael V. Niemczyk of 1015 W. St. James, Arlington Heights, and Kenneth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl K. Newquist of 407 N. Hickory, Arlington, composed their own marriage vows and chose the prayers and readings from Old and New Testaments. Father Frank Jenks performed the double ring ceremony.

SUSAN MADE her gown of white self-embroidered organza over ivory taffeta. Of modified Empire style, it had a full gathered skirt, full cuffed sleeves and scoop neck. Her full-length double-tiered ivory veil was held in place by a Camelot cap covered with fresh Chinese evergreen, daisies, plumaria and stephanotis that had been fashioned by her mother. She carried a mixed nosegay of pink plimaria, yellow iris, coral roses, daisies, baby's breath and stephanotis.

Mrs. Niemczyk also made the dress worn by the maid of honor, the bride's sister, Mary Ann, of Arlington Heights. The A-line floor-length gown of coral organza over taffeta had a deep inverted pleat of flowered organza print in back and matching ruffle at the neck. She wore fresh daisies in her hair and carried of nosegay of daisies, baby's breath and coral roses.

THE BRIDEGROOM'S SISTER, Kristin, of Arlington Heights, was bridesmaid. Her gown, identical in styling to Mary Ann's, was in a light shrimp shade and had been sewn by Mrs. Newquist, who also made her own dress, a beige linen sheath embroidered with yellow and orange flowers. She wore a yellow cymbidium orchid. Kristin wore daisies in her hair and carried a nosegay.

The bride's mother made her own gown, an Empire style of lime colored lutesong with which she wore a yellow cymbidium.

James Milne of Arlington Heights, a friend of the groom was best man, and Allan Batts of Denver, Colo., the groomsman. Susan's brothers, Mark and Michael, of Arlington Heights, ushered.

SPECIAL GUESTS at the wedding and at the reception held at Mount Prospect Community Center included the groom's grandparents from Colorado, Mr. and Mrs. L. Gustafson.

The bridal couple both were graduated from Arlington High School in 1968. Susan attended the University of Illinois and Kenneth, Colorado State University, Fort Collins. Both will be seniors this fall at Colorado State, she in dietetics and he in ploitical science.

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

That's Just Sherry Nonsense

Take Your Choice: Thrifty Or Thin

by MARY SHERRY

When my husband says I'm penny wise and pound foolish, he is right. But not only is he right in the way he thinks. He knows, and I admit that when I shop I compute the price of canned goods to the very gram in search for a few cents' savings. Then in the same thought wave I can suggest blowing $30 on a dinner out for two.

But I am much more seriously penny wise and pound foolish when it comes to leftovers. I can't pass up a leftover for lunch. Oh, I know that I should be having a hard-boiled egg and cucumber sticks, but as soon as I open the refrigerator, supposedly to get the egg, a cold bowl of chili beckons irresistibly. Usually I instantly forget all about the egg, but when I have to rationalize, I convince myself that it would be a terrible waste not to eat the leftover. This costs me an average of 356 calories, but otherwise the meal is absolutely free.

NOW IT HAPPENS on occasion that there aren't any leftovers. One would think that under such a circumstance that it would be easy to have that egg and cucumber and grow thin.

But consider this kitchen scene, about 11:45 a.m. when my three children come in clamoring for a meal.

"What's for lunch?" they demand to know, singly and together.

I have the confidence of knowing, as does every mother, that unless lunch is p e a n u t butter sandwiches, someone doesn't like it.

"Macaroni and smoked sausage," I answer. Or I say, "Spaghetti," or "ravioli" or "lasagna."

One or more reply, "Yuk," or "Why do you ALWAYS have something I don't like?" or "Again? We just had that six months ago!"

Anyway, while this exchange is going on, my egg is cheerily being boiled to hardness, and I have decided not to scrape off the cucumber skin this time because I am so famished.

WHEN THE KIDS finally sit down I dish up and jealously serve their separate lunch, leaving a bit on the stove . . . just in case . . . But soon that, too, is claimed.

By now, my egg and cucumber sticks have also disappeared amazingly fast and have left me the sensation of having not eaten for two days. So at this point my only hope is the child who doesn't like his lunch.

"Stop playing with it!" I yell after excusing the two who have finished. My tone is so authentic that I almost convince myself that I mean it.

"You have exactly four minutes to finish!" I announce grimly.

"Two minutes!" I threaten after three minutes.

The child stares in disgust at the remaining food for a little while longer until I dismiss him and mutter vague threats and warnings about what happens to those who don't finish their food.

THEN I CLEAR his place and look at that luscious leftover. It WOULD be a shame to waste it — to just throw it out, so . . . Another 356 calorie lunch has been had.

Maybe if I think hard enough I can blame it on our society or on my upbringing, but it seems to be impossible to be both thrifty and thin.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: Recently I was discussing with a friend how attractive a punch bowl was with dry ice in it; the "smoke" pouring out gave it real elan. My friend said that might be so, but she thought it was a dangerous practice and people were foolish to use dry ice in this fashion. What's wrong with it?—Lorraine H.

Well, if just a tiny piece of dry ice broke off from the main piece and was swallowed by an unsuspecting person it might be fatal. Used properly, it's a fantastic product — but it's obviously not for punch bowls.

Dear Dorothy: I probably sound pretty stupid but have always wondered exactly what happens when leavening agents (baking powder, baking soda or yeast) added to batters and doughs to make them rise. Do you mind explaining this to a neophyte cook?—Joe O.

Not stupid at all. I'll bet not one man a thousand can answer this question. When moisture is added to leavening agents, bubbles of carbon dioxide are formed. The gas penetrates into the air cells in the batter or dough and makes them grow in size. As the cells grow larger, the mixture rises. The heat in the oven makes the cells grow even larger and so the food rises still more. Toward the end of the baking time, the food no longer rises because the cell walls begin to set.

Dear Dorothy: No matter what kind of pan I use in cooking spaghetti or macaroni, it has never failed to stick. Any suggestions?—Eva B.

It sounds as if you are not using enough water. If you are using sufficient water and it still sticks, try lightly greasing the pan. Many people just put a lump of butter in the water when cooking pasta so that it won't boil over.

Dear Dorothy: My neighbor has some l o v e l y r o s e s f r o m which she has offered to let me get slips. Have you ever done this? Would love to try it if it isn't too difficult.—Louise A.

Slipping roses is one of the fun projects in a gardener's life. Cut a stem from a rose that has just bloomed, cutting just below a set of leaves, then strip off all but two sets of leaves. The end of the stem is wet, then dipped into a rooting hormone and put in a hole filled with sand and peat moss. This is then covered with a glass jar. The best time is the fall when the plant has all winter and spring to develop roots. It's a long time to wait for something in the garden but worth the small effort.

Dear Dorothy: Can I use canned fruit for a fruit pie filling? What do I use for thickening and in what amount?—Pat Solomon.

You certainly can. Many canned fruits have directions on the can for thickening the contents to make fruit pies. One friend uses 2 tbsp. flour to 3 cups filling and sugar to taste. Some use taploca and some cornstarch. The thickening is different for the various kinds of fruit.

Fashion by Genie

Very bluntly speaking . . . no matter what's in fashion, it takes a good figure to wear it. The first of the month is a good starting point to take steps in eliminating bulges and flab.

What's needed is a daily exercise program and, of course, will power. Take advantage of all the fresh fruits and vegetables available. Substitute salads for big hot meals. They're a lot easier to fix anyhow.

The following exercises are given to Eastern Air Lines stewardesses to prepare them for new "mini pants" uniforms.

1. To tighten outer side of thighs, lie on back on floor. Place arms straight out on floor from shoulders and kick to reach opposite hand with toes. Repeat six times for each leg.

3. To firm hips and thighs and whittle waist, lie on back with arms outstretched from shoulders. Bend right knee, roll as far as possible to left side, keeping arms and shoulders flat on floor, left leg straight. Repeat six times. Reverse legs. If you do this with one lifted leg straight rather than bent at the knee, you work thighs even more.

4. An isometric thigh and derriere shaper to do whenever you can: Sit on a chair with legs together, feet flat on floor. Tighten thighs and buttocks, hold to count of six, relax to count of six, repeat six times.

5. To tighten fanny and back of thigh, stand with legs six inches apart, arms at sides. Lift right leg back leading with heel, until you feel muscles tightening. Return to standing position. Repeat six times. Reverse legs.

An exercise program should start slowly and build gradually. Overdoing it at the beginning might cause strained muscles. It's best to exercise for a few minutes before breakfast each day, but if you know you won't do it then, exercise before going to bed at night. The body hugging styles are well worth the effort.

It's Fashion

by United Press International

Back-to-school fashions for the small fry reflect many of the new styles for grownups. Take hot pants. They show up with or without suspenders in quilted calico, corduroy, denim, knits plain or patterned and in cotton suedes. Some are paired with cotton rib turtleneck sweaters, others with blouses. Several manufacturers do the pants with bib tops.

Many Weeks Of Rehearsal Pay Off

by ALAN AKERSON

Snare drummer Mike Herbert, a member of the John Hersey High School Band, was putting strips of adhesive tape around the base of his fingers during the bus ride to Soldier Field Friday. The band was to perform at the Baltimore Colts-College All-Stars football game. The tape protected his fingers from the drum sticks.

"The show will be sort of easy — once we get going. We'll have problems seeing where we're going because of the strobe lights. But, I'm not worried."

The strobe lights he referred to would be set up on both sides of the field for the band's 10-minute halftime show. In one of the sequences the blinking strobe lights would be used to create a flickering effect as the band marched.

Playing and marching: all with precision

Mike and the other 179 members of the band from the school in Arlington Heights had been rehearsing several weeks for the pregame performance and the halftime show they would provide Friday night. Earlier last week, the band went through a series of dress rehearsals, in part because the ABC television crews wanted to be sure their cameras could pick up the strobe effect.

But, though the band members had rehearsed the show over and over, and though they knew the individual routines and patterns by heart, they could hardly be blamed for a little nervousness. Tens of thousands would watch them from the stands of the newly remodeled Soldiers Field. And tens of millions across the nation would watch them on network television.

The pregame performance included a march onto the field, the song, "My Kind of Town"; the national anthem; and the song, "Chicago," as the band marched off. It was over in a few minutes.

The contest got under way with the crowd making it clear right away that it was rooting for the All Stars. Thirty official playing minutes later there was the sound of a gun; the first half was over. It was time for Hersey.

With a voice that would make a ringmaster envious, the announcer opened the show: "Ladieeees and gentlemen! The John Hersey High School of Arlington Heights takes great pride in presenting America's foremost high school band, the incomparable John Hersey Marching Band with its dazzling spectacle of lights!"

The show was on.

Precision marching. A high-stepping drum major. The glockenspiel that can somehow always be heard despite all the horns and drums. Songs like "I Got Rhythm," "Somebody Loves Me," "Summertime."

The band: at one time a rectangle. Then a series of diamonds. Next a set of circles, rotating, one inside another.

Suddenly every light on the field went out. Simultaneously 180 tiny lights on top of the band members' caps were turned on. Green, orange, white. Each circle formation with a different color.

And then: "Ladieeees and gentlemen: the world's only stroboscopic marching band presents the shimmering magic of 'STROBOMOTION'!"

Fourteen white-bright blinking strobe lights lined along the sides of the field flashed on, and the band transformed the field into a combination of psychedelia and old-time flicker movies.

The show ended with a sequence bow, something that resembles a dominoes falling, one after another.

Later, back in the stands, Drum Major Neal Firth of Mount Prospect summed up the performance as he talked to his parents: "There were mistakes — but I think we did pretty good."

Arlington Edges Logan Square For Title

Arlington Heights won the Ninth District American Legion double-elimination playoff tournament with a come-from-behind 9-8 victory over the Logan Square Lions Sunday at Recreation Park.

Arlington thus won all four of its tourney games without a loss. Logan Square is the league's regular-season champion with a 16-2 final record.

Jim Hopkins gained the victory with a sparkling relief job and Mike Pettenuzzo took the loss, following Joe Bombicino to the hill.

Arlington jumped to a 4-0 lead after two and a half innings as Jim Locassio doubled in the first two runs.

Logan Square cut the lead in half with two in the third, Bombicino driving in one and the other scoring on an error.

A five-run fourth put the Lions ahead 7-4. A costly leadoff error made three of the runs unearned. Driving in the runs were Pettenuzzo on a sacrifice fly and Pete Cavallero, Steve Smith, Joe Bobowski and Jim Quade on singles.

Arlington exploded for a five-run inning of its own in the seventh to lead 9-7. A two-run double by Leja gave Heights the lead and he scored on Locassio's hit. Prior to that had been an error, walk and hits by Mike Wilbins, Mark Leonhard and Bruce Frase.

Logan Square's final run came on a sacrifice fly by Steve Smith. A two-out line shot by Bobowski appeared to be enough to bring in the tying run from second, but the ball struck Pettenuzzo on the shoulder and he was immediately out.

Pete Cavallerro climaxed a seven-for-13 tourney at the plate with four for four yesterday to win the trophy for top batter of the tourney. Bob Leja won the other trophy for most valuable in the tourney in a vote of coaches and sportswriters. Both trophies were donoted by the Herald.

Another team trophy, of course, went to the Arlington team from the Ninth District Legion posts.

(For more details and analysis of the championship game and tournament, see Larry Everhart's column in Tuesday's Herald).

Lions Roar Past 'Tired' Palatine

by PAUL LOGAN

"Hey, how can you beat St. Viator on Sunday?" muttered a Palatine legion baseball fan referring to the number of parochial school players on Logan Square's team.

The statement inferred that the Lions, taking on Post 690 in the semifinals of the Ninth District Tournament, had heaven on their side.

The Lions enjoyed a few good breaks, but brought on most of them with sheer hustle. Their performance was superior to Palatine in every department and it earned for them an 8-0 victory at Recreation Park Sunday.

A strong wind blowing in figured to make this important tourney game a low scoring affair. However, Palatine — pressed into using its top pitchers in Saturday's 10-9 loss to Arlington — was sorely needing a lift from Bob Sander, but it wasn't his day.

Logan Square drove him from the mound in the third inning with a four-run uprising for a 5-0 lead and seemed to coast the rest of the way. The Lions added two in the fifth and one in the eighth to wrap it up.

The Lions, however, received some clutch pitching from Terry Smith and Joe Bombicino. The latter coming in for the final three innings to give Smith a rest. Together they limited the Post 690 bats to just six hits and allowed just one base runner during the final four innings.

Coach Larry Nomellini's team jumped on Sander in the first inning on a walk, a pair of ground outs and a bloop single by Steve Smith.

The third inning, probably the most demoralizing for Palatine, started the same way. Terry Smith walked and Ken Martin, who had scored in the first, tripled him home with a shot to left-center despite the wind. Pete Cavallero walked and moved to second on a Mike Pettenuzzo single. That was the end for Sander and Randy Jones took over.

Jones' first pitch was wild and both runners moved up. Following an infield pop up, Steve Smith rocketed a fly to center that scored one and the relay went into the Palatine dugout to score another.

Cavallero started off the fifth using the walk again. After two ground outs moved him to third, Bombicino singled him home. He stole second, a trick which wasn't hard for either team because of the wind, and moved to third on the catcher's throwing error. Bobowski then singled him in.

The final run was a gift. Martin reached on a fielder's choice, stole second, went to third on a passed ball and scored on a dropped outfield fly. Bill Arkus, who took over pitching duties in the sixth, was the frustrated pitcher this time.

Bombicino fanned the side in the seventh, his first inning. Then he proceeded to chalk up two more while allowing just one hit the rest of the way.

The only thing that seemed to go Coach Bob Grybash team's way was a triple play pulled off in the second inning. Bobowski reached third on an error, stolen base and passed ball and Jim Quade was on first. Bill Hake lofted a short fly to left and Jones made the put out and then fired to easily double up Bobowski at the plate. Then catcher Steve Kellett threw a strike to second and Bob Bain tagged out Quade.

Other than that, last Sunday's first game at Recreation Park was all Logan Square.

SMOKEY SLIDE. Mike Wilbins of Arlington Heights is tagged out at the plate by Palatine pitcher Steve Garoutte Saturday in a District Nine American Legion playoff game. Garoutte and batter Bruce Frase await the call by the plate umpire. Wilbins was attempting to score from third base on a wild pitch. Arlington Heights won the game 10-9 in 11 innings. Heights Pulls Out Wild One In 11

by LARRY MLYNCZAK

The old expression goes that after you've seen 10 baseball games you've seen everything that can happen.

For those who were onhand Saturday afternoon at Fremd in a District Nine tournament game between Arlington Heights and Palatine, they saw everything that could ever happen in a baseball game in one 11-inning scrapping tussle.

Arlington Heighrs advanced to the championship round of the tournament by scoring two runs in the bottom of the 11th inning —without a hit — to post a 10-9 victory over Palatine.

No less than seven pitchers paraded to the mound and they promptly issued 19 runs, 20 hits, 26 walks and hit two batters while throwing an incredible total of 420 pitches. On the average, 240 pitches constitutes a ball game.

Arlington Heights went into the bottom of the 11th trailing Palatine by a 9-8 count. Then the unusual — which was usual in Saturday's contest — occurred.

Jim Bokelmann got the inning going by reaching first base on an error, one of 10 in the game. Bob Leja put down a perfect sacrifice bunt and Bokelmann took second. After Jim Locascio flyed out deep to center field, there were two outs and it appeared Palatine was on its way to the championship round.

In order to set up a force play, Palatine manager Bob Grybash ordered Arlington Heights' Dave Lundstedt to be intentionally walked, despite the fact that Lundstedt would be the winning run if he scored.

Palatine pitcher Rick Peekel, who had blanked Arlington Heights for five straight innings, went to a 3-and-2 count on pinch hitter Chuck Dillon before walk-

Lions Escape Ax; Win, 3-2

by JIM COOK

The ax hung over the loser of this one.

Park Ridge and Logan Square each had already suffered a defeat upon entering the fifth game of the Ninth District Legion Tournament with the promise of no tomorrow for the victim.

It wasn't young Ken Martin's first taste of extreme pressure by any means, but he must have been a bit jittery when Park Ridge hammered his offerings for two runs in the very first inning.

The little southpaw quickly found his rhythm, however, and two-hit Park Ridge over the final eight frames as the Lions modestly bought another playoff ticket for Sunday, 3-2.

The Ridgers appeared to have Martin solved as Larry Gawaulich, Larry Kolbus and Gordy Frano each went to right field with the fastball for a run. Martin, noticeably shaken, proceeded to uncork a wild pitch enabling the underdog's second run to tally.

Ridge right-hander Larry Teschner survived a two-walk, one hit Logan Square assault in the first when Joe Bombicino rapped into a sharp double play.

The Lions cut their deficit in half in the second, though, as Stan Bobowski drilled a leadoff single to left and took second when his shot escaped the left fielder for an error.

Jim Quade followed with an infield hit that shoved Bobowski to third, but Bill Hake got under a Teschner fastball and popped to first on an attempted squeeze play.

Mike Garbus kept the ball on the ground as his bleeder to second forced Quade, but offered more than enough time for Stan to cross with the ice-breaking marker.

The league champions continued pounding on the door in the third as Pete Cavallero drew a leadoff pass and promptly pilfered second.

Neither Mike Pettenuzzo nor Steve Smith were able to advance the runner, but Bombicino responded with a booming triple to center for the tying score. Bobowski added what proved to be the winning punch when his single split the bag at second, scoring Bobicino.

Martin took care of the rest. He avoided disaster ignited by an error in the second by notching one of his six strikeouts and set down the heart of Park Ridge's order in the third.

A single and a walk posed more trouble in the fourth, but the control-artist blew a third strike past Kevin Klett to escape again. Two more passes in the fifth were accompanied by another timely whiff.

He shot down the side again in the sixth and relied on a specacular play by Cavallero at short in the seventh to protect the tissue-paper margin.

That was as close as Park Ridge was to come, though, as Martin retired the final six hitters, one on a sparkling grab in right by Mike Garbus.

ROUNDING THE TURN. Mike Wilbins of Arlington Heights rounds the turn at third base as Rich Gawron of Palatine awaits a throw in from the outfield. Wilbins had earlier walked, went to second on an error and advanced to third on another error on the same play. He later scored in the first inning activity as Arlington Heights won 10-9 in 11 innings to advance to the championship round.

Conant Alive In Tourney, Other Locals Eliminated

Hersey, Grove Win Openers

Elk Grove and Hersey were the only teams besides Conant to advance to the second round of the summer high school tournament, but Conant was alive after Saturday's play.

Also falling by the wayside in the opening round were Wheeling, Arlington and Forest View.

Defending summer tournament champion Evanston eliminated Elk Grove after the Grenadiers advanced to the second round off a 3-2 triumph over Barrington.

The Grove nibbled away for a 3-2 lead before the Wildkits rallied for a pair in the sixth for a tense 4-3 decision.

The Grenadiers broke in front on a walk to Bob Prince and back-to-back singles by Steve Scholten and Scott Pruitt but Evanston bounced back for runs in the second and third.

Elk Grove earned the equalizer in the third as Pruitt, Mark Workman, Dan Connelly and Rick Hauserman all drew passes to force one across. Elk Grove regained the lead on Hauserman's RBI single to right with the bases loaded, but Pruitt was gunned down at the plate.

Grenadier starter Jeff Stewart was lifted in the fifth when Evanston staged its winning rally. Bob Streich mopped up with hitless relief, but the Grenadiers couldn't muster another offensive.

Barrington spotted Elk Grove a 1-0 edge on Connelly's single, a balk and an infield out before capturing a 2-1 margin in the sixth.

Coach Larry Peddy's outfit rallied for a decision deuce on Hauserman's single, an outless fielder's choice and singles by Stewart and Tony Tringali.

Jim Emslie went all the way for Elk Grove who closed the season with a 16-11 record.

The Huskies, playing in their second round of the tournament at Notre Dame Saturday after an opening bye, showed it was a team that would never give up.

However, the Dons — despite making six errors — managed to hold on to defeat the Huskies 8-5. Notre Dame now advances to the Harrer Park in Morton Grove to take on Conant at 6 p.m.

Notre Dame socked Hersey with a seven-run third inning — the biggest production the Dons have had in one inning this season. Hersey battled back but just couldn't make use of some excellent opportunities.

The Huskies could have taken the lead in the first inning when runners reached second and third without an out. One was nailed at the plate in an attempted steal and the other was left stranded.

After the big Don uprising which included a double, triple and homer, the Huskies came up with two runs in the bottom of the inning.

Following a walk and a single to center by Dave Zare, Al Weichers reached on a run-producing error. With runners on second and third and two outs, Steve Kuebler singled in one but the other was cut down at the plate on a fine throw from a Don outfielder. This play and the other at the plate sparked Notre Dame, according to Don head coach Jim Meyer.

Hersey made it 7-3 in the fourth on a walk to Mike Broderick and a double by Casey Frankiewicz. The Huskies tallied two more in the sixth. After Bob Marzec reached on an error and was moved to third on a single by Broderick, the Don shortstop booted the next grounder to score one. Then he errored again to make it 8-5, the closest the Huskies of Coach Harvey Foster could come.

NO DOUBT. Palatine third baseman Rich Gawron leaves little doubt that Bob Leja is out at third base by putting the glove right in front of the bag and forcing Leja to slide into the glove before the bag. Leja was out trying to stretch a double into a triple but he still drove in a pair of runs. Arlington Heights won the contest 10-9 in 11 innings. Wheeling's 1971 summer baseball season has ended, you can bet that Coach Ron DeBolt's boys will be heard from loudly and clearly during the high school season next year.

Wheeling closed out a 20-5 campaign in unusual fashion. Not only was it a losing note, but the pitching that had bought the Wildcats a share of the Northwest title, faltered in the summer league's opening tournament game.

Drawing defending champion Evanston in the opening round put the pressure on early, but Wheeling clubbed its way to a 4-2 advantage after one inning.

Evanston broke the ice initially when 'Cat hurler Mark Griffin yielded a lead-off homer, three straight walks and a hit batsman.

Wheeling countered on Bert Newman's single, a towering homer by Jim Kass, a walk to Dave Giles, a run-scoring single by Tony Schuld and an error for four runs.

Griffin, however, never fully recovered from Evanston's first inning barrage and touched for two more in the second and fifth and a singleton in the fourth before yielding to reliever Bob Peter.

Things looked pretty good for Arlington in the opening round. The Cardinals held a 4-0 lead over Notre Dame heading into the sixth inning.

Then the Dons scored five runs with the help of three errors and held on to win 5-4 on Friday.

Arlington scored three in the second and one in the fifth. Kevin Donahue led off with a single but was cut down trying to steal. But Rick Kolari singled, Bob Harth walked and Brian Hogan had a bunt single to load the bases. Wayne Geyer singled in two and, after two were out, Dan Cunningham drove home another with a single.

John Dillon started the fifth with a single, moved to second on a walk to Dave Kubik and scored on Donahue's single.

Then Kubik walked two Dons to start the fatal sixth. The next two singled and made it 4-3. And so Kubik, who gave up just three hits along with nine walks and three strikeouts, was relieved by Ray Hidensen. He might have received a save had it not been for three straight infield errors by the same player which allowed Notre Dame to take the lead for good.

Maine South jumped on a starter and loser Bob Richter in the second inning and took a 3-0 lead. Forest View, with Rick Hanning doing a shutout job in relief, tried to come back with a run in the third, but that was all the scoring for the day.

The Maine team, despite being out-hit 4-2, came away with a 3-1 victory in the opening round.

The Falcons tallied their run in this way — Richter singled, was pushed on second by a walk, went to third on a single by Chuck Willes and scored on a wild pitch.

Cougars Down Crown, Maine S.

Conant's baseballers are making a habit of showing the way to other Herald area teams when it comes to durability in surviving tournaments.

Just as they did in the spring tourney play, the Cougars became the last local team still alive in single-elimination summer league play with a pair of victories over the weekend over Crown and Maine South.

The latter contest Saturday was a wild 11-9 slugfest in which Conant had to come from behind with five runs in the sixth inning for a thrilling win.

It raised the red-hot Cougars' record to 15-7 for the season.

Conant pounded out 19 hits against the fine Maine squad. Leading the way were Keith Steelman, Bill Prebemton and Bill Gawron with three hits apiece — two of Gawron's being two-run triples. Steve Andrews, Jim Brown and George Pattee had two hits each.

Pattee hung in all the way on the mound, issuing all three of his walks in a seven-run Maine South sixth.

Conant, the home team, scored twice in the first on Gawron's first triple after singles by Steelman and Prebemton.

Maine got one run back in the third but the Cougars upped their lead to 4-1 in the fourth on successive singles by Andrews, Brown and Pattee and Dave Valerio's double.

The Hawks jumped ahead by four runs with their seven-run eruption on the three walks, a triple, two singles and an error.

Conant closed to 8-6 on four straight singles — by Gawron, Brown, Pattee and Mike Rossman.

After Maine South raised the lead to three again, Conant's five-run sixth decided it. Steelman singled, Prebemton doubled, Gawron again tripled for two runs, Bill Koppari also tripled for the tying run, an error let in the winner, and Rossman's single provided an insurance tally.

The Cougars had advanced with an 8-2 breeze over Crown at Crown Friday. Pattee pitched five innings and Ken Hubbard the last two. They combined to allow just one hit but 10 walks.

More than enough runs scored for Conant in the second, when they pushed across five. Andrews singled, Koppari and Pattee doubled (the latter for two runs), and Rossman singled before an error.

Coach Jerry Cunningham's squad will try to continue along the tourney trail today when they go to Niles to take on Notre Dame. Conant needs two more wins to cop the 16-team Northwest League tournament and go to the big tourney at White Sox Park in Chicago against five other league winners.

Arlington Heights Pulls Out Wild One In 11th, 10-9

Peekel worked to a 3-and-2 count against Mike Wilbins but the next pitch was a ball which scored Bokelmann and left the bases loaded.

Arlington Heights manager Lloyd Meyer then inserted Gene Elsberg in as a pinch hitter. Peekel threw two called strikes pass Elsberg but then came back and threw four straight balls and Elsberg walked which brought in Lundstedt with the winning run.

Palatine had taken a 9-8 lead in the top of the 11th after two were out. Steve Kellett singled up the middle for his third hit of the day. A walk to Peekel put runners on first and second and Bill Arkus delivered with his first hit of the game to score Kellett and break an 8-8 tie.

Palatine took a 1-0 lead in the first inning, taking advantage of wildness by Arlington Heights starter Mike Moffo and a balk by Moffo.

Arkus started the game with a walk and Dave Hauswirth walked to put two runners on. After a fly out, Rich Gawron walked to load the bases. As Moffo was taking a windup while facing Randy Jones, Jones stepped out of the batter's box but no time out was called. Moffo halted his windup and was charged with a balk which brought home Arkus from third base.

Moffo got out of the inning with a strikeout and a tag out on Hauswirth who was attempting to score on a wild pitch.

Arlington Heights took advantage of the wildness of Palatine starter Mark Wicklund to take a 3-1 lead in the bottom of the first.

Wilbins started it off with a walk and advanced to third on an error by the catcher and an error by the center fielder on a stolen base attempt.

After two were out, Bruce Frase walked and stole second. Bokelmann walked to load the bases. Leja was walked and that brought in Wilbins. Lecascio lined a single to left field to bring in Frase and Bokelmann.

A two-run double by Leja scored Mark Leonard, who had walked, and Frase, who had singled, in the bottom of the third inning to give Arlington Heights a 5-1 lead.

Palatine closed the gap to 5-2 in the top of the fourth as Kellett reached first on an error, went to second on a wild pitch and scored on a double to right-center by Wicklund.

Moffo started the fourth inning for Arlington Heights with a single and went to third on an outfield error. That was the end of Wicklund who had thrown 71 pitches in three innings of work.

Wilbins greeted Palatine relief pitcher Steve Garoutte with a double to right-center to score Moffo easily from third base.

Palatine went into the top of the sixth inning trailing 6-2 but the club was not trailing long.

In that frame Gawron blasted a 335-foot grand slam home run to give Palatine the lead.

Kellett got the inning started with a single. After one out, Arkus was hit by a pitch and at that point Meyer removed Moffo and put Jim Hopkins on the mound. Moffo was noticeably tired after having thrown 111 pitches.

Hauswirth worked a walk out of Hopkins to load the bases and Hosel lined a single to center field to score Kellett but the bases remained loaded.

Gawron watched the first two Hopkins' offerings go by for balls. Hopkins, who had been trying to hit the inside corner and was missing, put the ball on the inside corner, knee high, and Gawron proceeded to crash the ball out of the ball park over the right field fence. That gave Palatine a 7-6 lead.

The lead did not hold up long, however.

Steve Koch drew a walk and Leonard rapped a single. Frase was safe on an error and Bokelmann slammed a single to score Koch and Leonard to give Arlington Heights a 8-7 lead. At this point Grybash inserted Peekel as the new pitcher.

Palatine scored the tying run up against Leja in the top of the eight after two were out. Gawron walkd, stole second and scored on a single to left by Jones.

Three innings later Palatine scored against reliefer Lundstedt but Lundstedt ended up being the winning pitcher as Arlington Heights came back with two runs against Peekel to gain the championship round berth.

Despite the fact that the pitchers were quite generous, both teams failed to score in a number of opportunities. Palatine left 13 runners on base, eight of them in scoring position, and Arlington Heights left 11 runners on base, eight of them in scoring position. Arlington Heights had three runners tagged out at the plate and Palatine had one caught at the plate.

Actually, there wasn't much that did not happen.

NARROWLY NIPPED. Arlington's Bruce Frase just beats throw from the outfield after a caught fly ball in a Ninth District Tournament game with Logan Square. Arlington won 4-1 Friday. Joe Bombicino takes the throw.

Top Dogs Take Honors

Lord Mill Hause won top honors in the Paddock Publications sponsored dog show Saturday.

The big brown dog, handled by Shelia Draut of Arlington Heights, first captured the division involving tricks and then, going against three other dogs who had won earlier in the day, took home the grand champion award.

Placing second and third respectively in the tricks category among 34 dogs were Denise Eland of Arlington and her dog Molly and Leon DeWyze, also of Arlington, and his dog Dixie.

Winning the best costume award were Laurel Keplinger of Arlington and her dog Heather among 27 competing dogs. Kathy Uhrich and Pipi finished second and Caroline Iwans of Palatine and her dog King took third.

Meg Heinz of Arlington and Tina won the smallest dog prize with Diane McLennan and Tequita and Barbara Moore and Buffy, all of Arlington, placing second and third, respectively, among 25 dogs.

Luke Weeg of Arlington and Ben took the largest dog award, Tracy Cook and Toka were second and Mary Burns and Boomer were third among 26 dogs competing.

All first place finishers received trophies with ribbons going to seconds and thirds. All contestants also received ribbons for competing.

Little City Benefit Today

Chicago area golf professionals and 150 amateurs will compete Monday at Hillcrest Country Club in the eighth annual Little City Pro-Am.

The event, sanctioned by the Illinois Professional Golfers Association, raises funds for Little City, a residential community in Palatine which provides training, treatment, education and rehabilitation for mentally retarded children.

In the last seven years, the Little City Pro-Am has raised more than $150,000 for the Palatine-based institution.

State Amature Golf Meet

The 41st annual Illinois State Amateur golf championship, sponsored by the Chicago District Golf Association, will get underway at Kankakee Country Club Tuesday.

The tourney will be 72 holes of stroke play, with the entire field of 150 playing 18 holes on Tuesday and Wednesday and a cut to the low 30 scorers and ties for the final 36 holes Thursday.

Michigan Athletes Busy

The University of Michigan swimming team will be well represented at the Pan-America games with Bill Mahony, Bill Kennedy and Mike Whitaker competing for Canada, Byron MacDonald and Dick Rydze for the United States and Jose Arahna for Brazil. Two of the school's track stars, high jumper John Mann and shot put and discus thrower Steve Adams, are in pre-Olympic training camps this summer.

Stamp Of Approval

Bowling will be honored with a commemorative U.S. postage stamp to be issued in Milwaukee Aug. 21, during the International Bowling Federation world tournament. Bowling is the fourth sport to be so recognized, following baseball, football and basketball in receiving a stamp of its own.

Arlington Snaps Jinx; Upsets Lions, 4-1

by JIM COOK

Who said there's no such thing as a "typical baseball game?"

Whenever arch-rivals Arlington and Logan Square draw battle lines, an obvious thriller, characterized by ace pitching, sound defense, clutch hitting and a last-minute winning run generally prevail.

About the only deviation from the initial four meetings between these two powerhouses was Arlington's 4-1 triumph Friday evening. Logan Square had emerged on top in each case previously.

Coach Lloyd Meyer's pressure-players picked the most opportune time for their first derailing of the Ninth District's first-place team during the regular season.

Arlington advanced forward in the winner's bracket while shoving the Lions into the "no-tomorrow" loser's division of the double-elimination Legion playoff tournament.

Arlington righthander Jim Bokelmann, making only his eighth start of the season and first against the titlists since a leg injury kept him sidelined for the majority of the campaign, tamed Logan Square on just five hits over nine innings.

Dave Lundstedt, hitting eight in Meyer's lineup, delivered the key blow — a two-run double in the eighth — to ice the decision and saddle the Lions with only their ninth setback of the year.

Bokelmann continued up his road to recovery with a masterful outing, walking five, fanning eight and wiggling out of jams the three times Logan Square threatened.

The victors solved fire-balling Mike Pettenuzzo for the game's opening tally in the second when Bruce Frase coaxed his first of three passes, advanced to second on Bokelmann's sacrifice bunt and scored on Bob Leja's clutch single to right.

Arlington doubled its advantage in the second when Mike Wilbins singled to right, moved to second on a Pettenuzzo balk, and scored on Steve Koch's base hit over second base.

Logan Square threatened with the bases jammed and two out in the fourth, but Bokelmann escaped damage by getting Jim Quade on a fielder's choice to end the inning.

The Lions did end the drought in the seventh when Joe Bombicino collected his second straight single, took second on a wild pitch, moved to third on an infield out and scored on Quade's bad-hop single to third.

The top of the eighth opened as if Logan Square was about to stage one of its patented rallies when both Ken Martin and Pete Cavallero walked with nobody out. Bokelmann, however, blew a third strike past Pettenuzzo and induced Steve Smith to bounce into an inning-ending double play.

Lundstedt relieved some of the tension in the bottom of the eighth when he ripped a two-out, two-run double just out of the reach of Stan Bobowski who made a valiant diving attempt on the sinking liner to left.

'Darkness' Call Baffling

by LARRY EVERHART

The sun officially set a 8:11 Friday.

Even on cloudy days, there's enough daylight to play baseball until at least 10 or 15 minutes before sunset.

So how come the Mount Prospect-Park Ridge Legion game was called because of "darkness" at 7:30 Friday with two innings yet to play?

Only one man knows the answer to that one, and he wasn't telling.

That man was the plate umpire, who baffled everyone on both sides when he suddenly halted the game and walked off the field without a word.

Anyway, the game — a Ninth District tournament playoff clash at Fremd High School — went down in the books as a 5-1 triumph for Park Ridge that eliminated Mount Prospect from the tourney and kept Ridge alive for one more day.

Prospect could manage but one hit off Gordy Frano and was further frustrated when it couldn't cash in on several opportunities, the result of nine walks. Frano also struck out nine.

Gordy Hollywood went the distance for Prospect, allowing nine hits and eight walks. Dave Bergman and Bob Dagostino each had three hits including a double.

To add even more to the Prospectors' chagrin, they had strongly disagreed on several previous decisions by the same umpire who suddenly ended the game.

Even Park Ridge was amazed at having to stop, and even they probably never had to turn on the headlights of their cars all the way home.

"The biggest thing I couldn't understand," said Prospect coach Dick Grigsby, "was that he (the plate ump) never even consulted the base ump. I have never before seen a guy do that and not even talk to the other ump.

"Even the other guy was at a loss to explain. It was hard to figure, especially when it knocks us out of the tournament."

Park Ridge had broken the scoring ice in the third inning on a single, two walks, Frano's sacrifice fly and a two-run double by Dagostino.

Mount Prospect scored its only run in the sixth on an error. Keith Koentopp got the only hit off Frano in that inning, but three runners were stranded.

Palatine Powers Past Prospect, 20-4

by LARRY EVERHART

It was bombs away for Palatine's Legion team at Fremd High School Thursday in the opener of the Ninth District double-elimination playoff tournament.

Palatine's bats have never gotten such a workout and Mount Prospect pitchers must have felt like they were standing in the middle of a space missile testing center. At times, rockets were being launched every minute on the minute.

The hosts pounded out 18 hits, accepted eight Mount Prospect errors, and enjoyed a 10-run inning in running roughshod over the visitors, 20-4, in a long nine-inning contest.

Palatine thus earned a day of rest Friday, awaiting the winner of the Arlington Heights-Logan Square contest. Prospect, of course, put itself in a do-or-die situation.

Leading the hit parade were Rich Gawron (four for four, four runs batted in); Mike Honel (three for five, four RBI's); and Rick Peekel (two for four, three RBI's).

Peekel also gained the pitching decision, exiting with an 18-run lead to rest up for important warfare in the three tournament days ahead. Peekel gave up seven hits, one earned run and two walks while striking out 10 in just six innings.

Reliefers Bob Sander and Randy Jones also looked sharp, as did Prospect's Gus Esposito, who finally stopped the avalanche of hits.

Palatine scored seven runs in the first two innings, and all but one were unearned, compliments of five Prospect errors.

But that was just a warmup. The 13 runs that followed were all earned, the result of a fearsome hitting barrage.

Three more runs in the third put the game out of reach at 10-1 before Palatine enjoyed some batting practice with 10 runs and 10 hits in the sixth. Sixteen men paraded to the plate, six runs scored before an out was recorded, and the first seven men to bat in the inning singled.

Victim of the initial onslaught was starter Scott Rochelle and Ron Smoy couldn't cool off the hosts, either.

Two of Mount Prospect's four runs were unearned. Gordie Hollywood had two hits and drove in two runs, and Bob Kasper and Dennis Tite also had a pair of safeties apiece.

In the two-hit category for Palatine were Dave Hauswirth, Bob Bain, Bill Cheney and Peekel.

It was Palatine's 21st win in 23 games and upped their season record to 33-12.

Leja Puts 'Vida' In Heights Attack

by PAUL LOGAN

Allowing for a few reservations, Bob Leja could have been called the "Vida Blue" of the Arlington Heights pitching staff.

Leja, who hurled the Ninth District Tournament's opening round game at Recreation Park Thursday, had these similar characteristics to the Oakland Athletes' great pitcher:

- He had a four-hitter.
- He struck out nine.
- He ran to and from the mound each inning.
- He's a good hitting pitcher.
- He's lefthanded.
- He wears white shoes.

The two reservations are that he's white and he gave up quite a few walks. However, the latter was overlooked by Coach Lloyd Meyer as his experienced hurler led the Meyer Brothers Dairy team to a 3-0 victory over Park Ridge.

Leja, aided by a wind blowing in, dominated the proceedings, especially in the last four innings when he recorded six of his strikeouts. Only once did he make a bad mistake and then the Arlington defense took care of that as it did several times in contest.

Gordie Frano slammed a triple to open the fourth. However, a relay from center fielder Chuck Dillon-to-Steve Koch-to Bruce Frase after a fly ball cut down Frano at the plate. This was the first of two double plays executed by the winners.

Arlington took the lead for good in the third as Leja started things off with a bunt single, one of two hits he had in the game. He moved to third on an error and scored on a single by Mark Leonhard.

Leja also scored in the fifth. He reached second on a misplayed liner to left and scored on a single to center by Koch.

Leonhard and Jim Bokelmann teammed up to notch an insurance run in the eighth. Leonhard cracked a triple to right-center and Bokelmann squeezed him home with a sacrifice bunt. Leonhard shared hitting honors with Leja.

Barrington Edges Arlington

Arlington's last regular season game turned out to be a real frustrating one.

Trailing Barrington 5-0 heading into the fourth, the Cardinals came back to tie the game at 5-all only to see the Broncos rally for one in the bottom of the seventh to pull out a 6-5 victory in the Northwest Summer Baseball League.

Arlington made it 5-1 in the fifth on a walk to Dave Kubik and a double by Kevin Donahue.

The Cards tied it in the four-run sixth. They loaded the bases on a single by Brian Deevy, walk to Bruce Hill and single by Dan Extram. Dan Cunningham followed with a two-run single. John Dillon singled to move runners into scoring position and Donahue drove in two more with another single.

John Dillon started on the mound for the first time this year and his wildness (10 walks, five wild pitches) enabled Barrington to build up an early lead. However, Arlington could have still won the game had runners scored in the second or third innings when the bases were loaded.

A single brought home the tie breaker in the seventh.

Few Black Athletes In Commercials

by RICK DuBROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) There have recently been some very justified complaints that black athletes do not, as a rule, get as many opportunities in areas like television commercials as do their white counterparts.

The fact is that, aside from a relatively few black superstar athletes like Willie Mays, Hank Aaron and Wilt Chamberlain, most Negro sports heros — including many great ones — just don't get much of a chance in fields like video commercials.

What distresses some black athletes is that, rather often, a white athlete who may be only a so-so star will be preferred for these areas, which are lucrative and significant to professionals trying to cash in on their achievements.

Aside from the playing fields and occasional guest shots on entertainment shows, one of the places on television where black and white athletes get equal treatment is the widely syndicated, popular game series, "Sports challenge," in which teams of sports stars compete against each other.

GERRY GROSS, the energetic behind-the-scenes boss of "Sports Challenge," describes his show's attitude like this:

"We only take the guys who everybody looks up to. We want star power on TV and that can't be diluted by the color of a guy's skin

"We just want the top pros and couldn't care less about what color they are if they're exciting charismatic individuals. People aren't idolized according to religion or color. You don't think of that individual as being a black or white athlete, you think of him being a fantastic athlete."

No athlete is going to get rich appearing on "Sports Challenge" because, as Gross admits, he gets some big names in athletes to appear for relatively small money Nevertheless, the easy openness of the show, the reputation it has built among sports figures and the public's fascination with athletes and their accomplishments have done wonders toward putting the series over

The Doctor Says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — Can you please tell me how the doctor pinpoints ovulation in order to help a woman become pregnant more quickly? How would a 32-day cycle affect the time? Would ovulation occur at the same times as a 28-day cycle? If a man had a slightly lower sperm count, could it take longer for a woman to become pregnant, even knowing the time of ovulation?

Dear Reader — There are several ways to pinpoint ovulation. Taking the body temperature each morning before getting up will show a continuous drop in temperature to the time of ovulation, then a steep rise of 0.8 degree The temperature stays at that level until menstruation begins Usually ovulation occurs 14 days before the menstrual period, but there is a wide variation. Some women have conceived just before or just after their period.

Yes, if the sperm count is on the low side, it often takes more effort to induce pregnancy. It is a simple matter of the more sperm cells there are, the more likely one will connect with the ova. There are the measures that can be taken to help increase the sperm count in some people. Abstinence of three or four days before ovulation helps build up the amount of sperm cells stored and may help. It is a bit like the days of the American Revolution, when ammunition was in short supply and our soldiers were cautioned, "Don't shoot until you see the whites of their eyes."

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am 20 years old and have a problem with which I hope you can help me. I want to wear the new fashion, "Hot-Pants" but I have a few scars on my upper leg which make it difficult to wear them. My legs look terrible. Is there anything I can do?

Dear Reader — There is not much you can do about scars except to have plastic surgery. This isn't altogether out of the question, because you may have other reasons besides fashion for wishing to improve the appearance of your legs, but it is an expensive luxury.

Cosmetic surgery is important in helping improve people's self-image and promoting psychic health in some people. Some plastic surgeons have called it instant psychotherapy.

You have a few other choices, leg make-up (which certainly has its disadvantages), long Hot-Pants, or you might find some suitable long stockings, panty hose, leotards or opaque one-piece body stockings. Your scars probably don't look as bad to other people as you think.

Transportation Study Under Way

Interviewers will begin ringing doorbells this week asking suburbanites for their thoughts on transportation

A transportation survey, which 18 municipalities are paying 10-cents per person to have done, is being conducted by Harper College and the University of Illinois Circle Campus for the Northwest Municipal Conference

"Our interviewers will be carrying letters from the municipality explaining what the interviewers are doing," Ed Thomas, survey director, said.

"The important thing for residents to realize is that a refusal to reply is not a 'no' opinion An interviewee will have a chance to give his opinion about transportation, how he wants it paid for or almost anything he wants to express," Thomas said.

In addition, the survey will be used to determine travel behavior in the northwest suburbs: "You can't develop a transportation system unless you know how people are traveling now."

About 20 interviewers will contact 1,500 residences in communities from Park Ridge to Streamwood 'Most of our interviewers will be housewives from the municipalities where they will be interviewing We will also have a few students," Thomas said

Interviewers will be out in the communities about six weeks from 10 a m. to 4 p m and the early evening hours.

Goal of the $27,000 project is to develop a coordinated transportation system throughout the suburbs, including streets and highways, mass transit, terminals and parking facilities

Interviewing persons in 1,500 residences is one of three data collection methods being used. Municipal government officials and major employers will also be surveyed and existing transportation reports will be compiled in the final report.

The transportation survey is being coordinated from the Harper College campus in Palatine. Residences selected for the survey have been chosen through a random selection method.

Jim: "She's been the family boss for 39 years We had better do as she asks. Here's a good example in a no-trump grand slam South must concentrate on 13s There are 13 cards in each suit and he needs 13 tricks"

Oswald: "He had best make them. North has 22 high-card points opposite a 16-18 no-trump and will want to know what went wrong if South winds up one short"

Jim "South sees 12 top tricks and will make the grand slam if he can drop either black jack He should start by playing the red suit, because there is no problem there"

Oswald "East drops a heart on the third diamond and West gets rid of a diamond on the third heart, so South knows each opponent started with seven red cards and six black ones."

Jim: "Now South cashes his ace-king-queen of clubs. East shows out on the third club and South should now have a complete count."

Oswald: "East had exactly seven red cards and two clubs. That leaves him with exactly four spades. Now South cashes dummy's ace and queen of spades, leads the three of spades, and finesses his 10-spot with absolute certainty of success."

Deadline Donors Push Center Fund Over $10,000

The Herald's emergency fund to help save The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center has passed $10,000 — and additional donations are still coming in.

By Saturday, the fund had received a total $10,345 — $2,845 over the minimum goal of $7,500 required to keep the family service agency from curtailing service to Northwest suburbs.

The success of the appeal was met with rejoicing by staff members of the Center, headquartered at 1797 Oakton St., Des Plaines.

"The overwhelming response by the Northwest suburban area to the Herald's articles and editorials has been tremendous," said Mrs. Margaret Lisinski, district supervisor for The Salvation Army Center. "We are indeed deeply grateful for the community's interest and recognition for the need for the service and financial support.

"The emergency fund will enable us to keep the Center's present staff of social workers," she added, "and we will continue to be open five days and four nights a week."

THE CENTER IS the only professional family service agency available to suburbanites living in Des Plaines and Wheeling, Elk Grove, Palatine, and Schaumburg Townships.

To avoid a cutback in service to this area, the Center had to raise at last $7,500 by today. This goal represented one-half of the current $15,000 operating deficit. The balance is to be provided by a "matching grant" from a private foundation to be announced later this month by The Salvation Army in Chicago.

Center officials expressed hope that the "matching grant" will be increased to meet whatever total is contributed to the Herald emergency fund.

"To accommodate the large number of late donors, we are extending the fund drive deadline," said Charles E. Hayes, Herald editor in chief.

Donations may be sent to the Herald "Center Fund," P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. A final list of contributors will be published in Thursday's Herald.

The funds will be presented to the Center on Monday, Aug. 16 at a "victory" luncheon sponsored by the Herald.

AMONG MAJOR contributions made to the fund during the last few days were $177.65 from the Community Service Corps of Wheeling and Buffalo Grove, $100 from Bantam Books Inc., Des Plaines, and $100 from Peep's Hot Dogs, Arlington Heights.

Since the Herald fund was announced June 21, more than 1,800 readers have responded to the appeal. Support also has come from 24 Protestant and Catholic churches, seven service clubs, and several business firms.

If the foundation grant "matches" the fund total, the Center will be able to expand its present level of service as well as meet its 1971 deficit.

"We hope to secure enough money to add another full-time caseworker," explained Mrs. Lisinski, who added this would increase their present caseload capacity by 25 per cent.

You Can Still Help!

Contributions may still be made to The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center emergency fund.

Donations may be sent to Herald "Center Fund," P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006 The final list of donors will be published in Thursday's Herald.

Attorney To Request Order To Reinstate Fireman

by NANCY COWGER

A writ of mandamus, ordering reinstatement of David L. Carlson Jr., dismissed Hoffman Estates fireman, will be requested this week by Carlson's attorney, Gilbert A. Cornfield.

Cornfield announced Friday he will file action for the mandamus order this week. He was in the process of preparing papers for the action Friday

When action is filed with Cook County Circuit Court, the Hoffman Estates Fire Protection district board will have five days to respond, said Cornfield, and a court hearing then will be scheduled.

Carlson currently is undergoing a hearing before the district's board of trustees to determine whether it will uphold his July 14 dismissal from the fire district by Chief Carl Selke. The hearing opened July 23, and was recessed to Sept. 10 to allow Selke to prepare a written statement of charges, and to give Carlson time to prepare his answer. Carlson received the charges Tuesday morning, but Cornfield has advised him not to release them to the press yet.

"Since we haven't decided whether or not we should suggest this should be a closed hearing, I'd rather not release anything at this point," Cornfield said Friday.

ALTHOUGH CORNFIELD declined to specify the nature of the charges which Selke alleges brought about the dismissal, he said they refer to an alleged incident that occurred one week before Carlson was fired. Francis E. Kelly, attorney for the district, already has said the charges involve an incident at a fire, and that public release of them could prove "unnecessarily embarrassing" for Carlson.

While the mandamus action definitely will be taken no decision has yet been reached on other possible legal actions, said Cornfield. He also is considering seeking an injunction barring Mark Dick, chairman of the board, from sitting in the remainder of the hearing. A decision on that matter will not be made until Judge Harry Comerford, presiding judge of the county division of Circuit Court, indicates what position he will take on Dick's appointment to the board, said Cornfield.

Cornfield argued in the opening session of the hearing that Dick was sitting on the board, and chairing the hearing, with no legal authority. His judicial appointment expired in May, and he has not been reappointed, said Cornfield.

Kelly said that night he himself had submitted Dick's nomination, and it was awaiting action by Judge Comerford. Meantime, said Kelly, statute provides for Dick's continued appointment until a successor is named.

THE MANDAMUS ACTION will hinge on the question, raised July 23, of whether the district is covered by state statutes dealing with fire and police commissions. The board maintains it is not bound by those statutes, since it does not have a commission. Cornfield maintains the statutes do apply, because the district's policy of hiring on the basis of examination is provided in the statute.

If the statute does apply, Carlson cannot be dismissed until after having the due process of a hearing, claims Cornfield. The statute sets up procedure for dismissal of employes in fire districts, under which a hearing must be held before a person can be fired.

Carlson was fired July 14, and was granted his hearing July 21, with the hearing date set for July 23. His salary was cut off as of July 16.

If the Hoffman Estates district is covered by the statute, Chief Selke's actions were clearly improper, Cornfield maintains. Carlson should have been informed of charges against him, a hearing date should have been set and the hearing should have been conducted before he was fired, he said.

ANOTHER AREA for possible legal action rests with Carlson's claim he was fired because of union activities, said Cornfield. The board has stated it bars employes from joining an affiliated organization without permission, and Carlson is secretary-treasurer of Local 2061, International Association of Fire Fighters, AFL-CIO, formed in July. However, the board has since said the union membership is not the issue, and that the charges involve Carlson's conduct.

Nab 14 Teens In Shaumburg Burglaries

Fourteen Schaumburg teenagers, ranging in age from 14 to 16, have been apprehended by Schaumburg Village Police in connection with five burglaries, 10 thefts and an estimated six cases of criminal damage to property.

The juveniles, whose names cannot be used because of their ages, were apprehended Thursday. Police said six of them would be taken to Cook County Family Court on burglary charges, while the others would face station adjustments, under which regular police contact and supervision may be required. Of the six being taken to court, three are charged with three counts of burglary, one is charged with two counts, and two are charged with one count each.

Police said the youngsters committed the burglaries on nights when their parents believed they were sleeping in backyard tents.

With the apprehensions, police recovered several items of stolen property, and have since returned them to the owners, some of whom did not realize they had been burglary victims.

Among items returned were $85 worth of golf clubs, owned by Robert Schweiger, 1210 Weathersfield Way; a file cabinet with records, owned by Sheffield Park Swim and Racquet Club, 350 N. Springinsguth Rd., and golf clubs, with no value listed, owned by Jerry Amick, 929 S. Springinsguth Rd.

BY AUG. 20 this synchronized swim ballet group expects to master a perfect water pattern for the Schaumburg Civic Pool Water Show. The show is scheduled for the pool in Sharon Lane.

In Great Hall Wednesday

Testimony About PUD Will Continue

by PAT GERLACH

Testimony on a planned unit development (PUD) proposed for construction in proximity to Centex-Schaumburg Industrial Park in the south end of the village will continue Wednesday to the Great Hall.

Appearing before members of the zoning board of appeals Thursday, principals involved in the proposed 667-unit rental complex indicated that their 39.5-acre project would carry an estimated value of $11,340,000 on completion.

They plan to begin construction within six months and to complete the building program within three and one-half to four years.

Presently zoned M-1, the area is on Wise Road about one-half mile west of Roselle Road at the northeast corner of the industrial park and is in the area of Robert Frost Junior High School and the building proposed for construction by Twinbrook YMCA.

It is also in close proximity to the Meadow Knolls subdivision, a Schaumburg subdivision of half-acre homes built by the Branigar Organization.

CHICAGO TITLE AND Trust Company is owner of the land through trust agreement but beneficiaries are Bennett & Kahnweiler Associates, the Pritzker family and Centex Corporation.

Bennett & Kahnweiler has been active in developing industrial parks and commercial properties since 1947 and has 24 of these projects in the Chicago area plus others in Atlanta, Denver and San Francisco, according to their representative James Dana.

The Pritzker family is well known in business circles being the owner of the Hyatt House chain and involved in numbers of philanthropic works; Chicago Atty. Jack Pritzker is chairman of Schaumburg's cultural commission.

Centex Corp., is publicly owned, and builds and develops residential and industrial properties.

The project would contain two types of basic building, one of which would be T-shaped in structure and contain 63 apartments being of about two and one-half to three stories in height.

The second style of building considered is a U-shaped building which would contain between 32 and 38 units all of which would be three bedroom apartments.

The T-shaped structures would be restricted to one and two bedroom units, the developer says.

PROJECTED RENTAL for the 100 planned three bedroom apartments is $320; two bedrooms, planned for 369 units, will rent for $260; one bedroom units, 198 of them, would cost $202 per

The Nation

The Senate is beginning its final week before Congress' long summer recess faced with critical measures to extend the draft and insure the nation's largest defense contractor against bankruptcy. Senators must decide whether to revive the draft which expired July 1 and whether to guarantee repayment of $250 million in bank loans to Lockheed Aircraft Corp. Floor leaders advised Senate members to be prepared for late night sessions, not only to deal with these crucial measures, but possibly to take action to end a nationwide rail strike and approve an overhaul of regulations controlling political campaign spending.

Between the Lines

Refusal To Name School 'Insult'

by MARY REIFSCHNEIDER

The Schaumburg-Palatine Township High School Dist. 211 board is insulting a third of its students and taxpayers.

The insult is the board's refusal to promptly, before the groundbreaking takes place, name the fifth high school Hoffman Estates High School.

The groundbreaking for the school, to be located on West Higgins Road, is scheduled for sometime in September. Bids for construction of the school are due this week and next week.

Hoffman Estates residents and officials are more than a little miffed with the school board, and particularly its president, Robert Creek.

At the board's most recent meeting, July 22, Creek and his board arbitrarily decided the school shouldn't be named until public interest and pressure diminishes.

That's ridiculous. The board didn't delay holding a referendum to fund building of the fifth and sixth high schools until public interest dropped last September

What makes the board think that public interest and pressure is wrong now?

GOVERNMENT, including school boards, must be responsive to the people it serves.

Rumors have persisted in Hoffman Estates this summer that the school board wants to name the school something other than Hoffman Estates High School. The board's July 22 action certainly verifies this.

Unfortunately Hoffman Estates is not the home community for any of the Dist. 211 board members. One wonders if Mr. Creek lived in Hoffman Estates what his attitude about naming the school would be.

Hoffman Estates has nearly 27,000 residents and is still growing at a rapid rate. Dist 211 has already built one high school there and failed to name it after the community. This didn't happen in the case of Palatine or Schaumburg.

Hoffman Estates residents are justifiably proud of their community and Dist 211 should be too.

As Mayor Frederick Downey of Hoffman Estates said last week, the 211 board deserves an F for its attitude.

Mayor Downey also had some good advice for his constituents: bombard the board with reasons why the fifth high school should be named Hoffman Estates High School.

There's nothing wrong in letting the school board know you're interested.

Beautification Group Gives Views

Members of the Hanover Park Beautification Committee held its last informan session last week in the home of chairman, Mrs. Sonya Crawshaw. Future sessions will be held in the Village Hall.

The newly formed committee used the meeting to present its views and plans to Trustee Jim Lewis, who attended the session and will now act as liaison to the board of trustees.

Although no regular meeting date was set Wednesday, future meetings will be held in the hall on Lake Street; the date and time will be announced next week.

Also discussed were plans for a twice-yearly report telling residents about ecology, beautification and the villages policy on weed control and junk ordinances.

Mrs. Crawshaw said she believes much of the present dumping problems experienced within undeveloped or emtpy lots within the town could be stopped if residents were better informed.

SHE NOTED that it doesn't make much sense for a homeowner to lift, load and transport a junked water heater or large discarded item to an empty field blocks away when he could take it out to his front curb for pickup. She noted that not all residents know what services the community offers; with unlimited garbage pickup it would not seem necessary to dump anything, she added.

The committee decided that an annual arbor day planting ceremony will be held in all schools and started plans for next April's Earth Week observance.

"In this project the children of the community will play an important part," she said. Mrs. Crawshaw commented that kids tell it like it is" and added that they will be asked to advertise Earth Week with poster work and slogans.

The members will work together with the community council on a re-cycling program. Mrs. Crawshaw said the council has contact with many village organizations and groups and the mutual participation will bring total community involvment.

"That is this committee's goal," she said adding that only total community participation can the make the beautification committee an effective body.

"WE WILL of course try to get ecological information to the residents, and are concerned with preservation of our resources but there will also be actual practical work involved" she said.

The members have offered their services to the Park District. They also plan to contact 3-H Builders regarding detention ponds in the Barrington Road development area." They may need our help on maintenance," said Mrs. Crawshaw.

"Our most exciting plan for the future is the possibility of purchasing and planting a living evergreen go be used as a permanent Christmas tree for our annual tree lighting ceremonies," she said.

"These are just some of our ideas, but again I must stress that is is the residents we want to hear from," she said.

Mrs. Crawshaw urged people to attend the meetings and come up with ideas and suggestions.

"If problems exist come and tell us about it; the complaint can be anonymous," she said.

Urges Improvement Of Jones Road

To preserve the integrity of the Higgins-Golf Raod intersection, Jones Road must be improved, Richard Regan, chairman of the Hoffman Estates plan commission said last week.

The Higgins-Golf Road intersection is slated for major improvements as the widening on the two thoroughfares continues through Schaumburg Township

"It will be a high speed intersection. To run smoothly, there shouldn't be left turns from eastbound Higgins onto Golf Road," Regan said

Eastbound traffic on Higgins should turn left at Jones to gain access to the businesses in that area, Regan said.

Regan told Hoffman Estates trustees this week that the plan commission needs to know what portions of Jones Road are in Hoffman Estates and what portions are in Schaumburg.

SCHAUMBURG MAYOR Robert O. Atcher said the first half mile of Jones Road on both sides and another quarter mile on the west side is in Schaumburg, but the north portion is in Hoffman Estates

The road is blacktopped, but has no curbs and gutters and is in need of reconstruction.

Since few Schaumburg residents use the road, the village has not planned any major reconstruction of the road. Atcher said when the Bell Telephone Co. building now under construction at the southern end of the road is completed, the village would like to resurface its portion and turn the entire road over to Hoffman Estates.

The resurfacing probably wouldn't take place until next year.

PUD Testimony To Continue

The entire project would center around three lakes and be equipped with a community center and pool and tennis and badminton courts

The developers plan to use landscaping to buffer the area from nearby single family residences and were asked to consider some type of fencing to prohibit neighbor children from investigating the centrally located man-made lakes (retention ponds)

The developers plan to create a berm (which they describe as a three-foot mound of dirt) which will also serve to separate the development from its neighbors

Basically the petition was presented by Marlin Smith, counsel representing the project, and by Dana but also called on to present expert testimony were Seymour Goldstein, architect for the PUD; Thomas McCabe, a civil engineer, Rodney Anglund, senior vice president of Barton Aschmann & Associates; Thomas Larwin, also of Barton Aschmann & Associates, and John McMillan Ducey, president of the Institute of Urban Life

THROUGH PRIOR discussions with Dist 54, a cash contribution of $118,400 has been promised although there is disagreement between the district and the developer as to the number of school age children which would be produced.

Traffic information also appears to be in conflict as well as the projections delivered concerning widening and expansion of local roads Wise, Roselle and Nerge to main arterials.

A representative number of Meadow Knolls homeowners were present at the hearing to express their disapproval of the proposed PUD on a number of counts, including traffic, and made their feelings known.

Testimony alleging that the value of the 40 acres would be greater if developed industrially will be explained further by Dana at this week's hearing at the suggestion of the zoning board.

It was, however, stipulated that the builder and developer has no intention of seeking federal subsidy to construct the project and the aspect of low-income housing has been eliminated through the rental structure

In his testimony, Ducey projected the average income of those living in the project at about $15,000 annually.

A reworked design of the complex is also expected due to their failure to allow for the required 27 foot streets dictated by the ordinance governing planned unit developments in Schaumburg

Continued testimony will be heard at 8 p.m Wednesday at Schaumburg's Great Hall.

DISNEYLAND characters Mickey Mouse, Pluto and Br'er Fox helped open the Woodfield Twin Theatres Thursday during the Benefit premiere for the Schaumburg "September fest." The rocking chair theatres are located in the Woodfield Shopping Center.

Committee On Youth Presents Statement

The Schaumburg Township Board of Auditors deferred action Wednesday night on a statement of philosophy, organization and goals prepared by the township Committee on Youth, although it complimented the committee on its presentation.

"It was well thought out," said board chairman Vernon Laubenstein. But action was deferred for two reasons. The auditors want town attorney Norman Samelson to review the statement for legal points before they adopt it. Also, two board members, Mrs. Kathleen Wojcik, town clerk, and Walter (Pete) Wing, auditor, are out-of-town on vacation. Laubenstein said the board did not want to take action with only three members present.

The statement considered three major areas, counselling, programs and interagency cooperation. The committee employs one full time counselor, Russell Anslow, and one summer assistant, this year Tom Fashing. They counsel teens who are in trouble. Programs also are to be directed mainly at teens with problems, and will involve only a few persons at one time.

The statement spells out responsibilities of the employes more clearly, sets up lines of authority and shows on paper the organization of the committee's work and its functions, said Laubenstein.

Anslow also reported on work by Fashing since he was hired for the summer. Fashing prepared posters and information for a mobile booth, said Anslow, and stationed himself at different times in Hanover Park, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg, to talk to passers-by. He discussed the committee on youth with an estimated 250 teenagers and interested parents, explaining its function and offering its services. Anslow said the community contact showed that few persons were aware the committee and its counselors exist, and several sought help in personal problems. The counselors' monthly caseload has since jumped from three or four persons to 12 or 14, he said.

Laubenstein commented on recent publicity given to a Youth Outreach project planned by Twinbrook YMCA, saying he was encouraged to learn other agencies in the villages are recognizing some of the youth problems, and reacting to them.

In other business, the auditors voted to transfer its three bank accounts from Suburban Bank of Hoffman Estates and a Palatine Bank to the Roselle State Bank. Laubenstein said the transfer was a result of an "extraordinarily favorable" interest rate given to the township by the Roselle Bank on recent tax anticipation warrants. The rate, 2¾ per cent, represents a savings of money to all taxpayers in the township, and the transfer of funds is in recognition of that savings, said Laubenstein.

The board delayed a decision on renewing membership in the Council of Governments of Cook County until the two vacationing members return. Annual dues are $75.

Also, the board agreed to participate in the September Fest parade to be held in Schaumburg.

'Rap Session' Small, But Worthwhile

Only three or four teenagers attended a "Rap Session" for Hoffman Estates teens Wednesday night, said Frank Alexa, chairman of the village youth commission.

But the interchange of ideas was worthwhile, said Alexa, and the commission felt the project warrants holding more sessions.

"I figure maybe as the word gets around we might get bigger and bigger crowds," he said. The next session will be at 8 p m Aug 25, in the village hall, 161 Illinois Blvd.

Most discussion related to a suggestion by one young man, who urged some central record be kept of the dates and locations of all events held for or by teenagers, said Alexa. That way, the teens could find out from one persons what would be going on within the next week, and plan to attend any events that interested them Also, people planning events could avoid grouping too many things on the same night.

The teens seemed to like the session, said Alexa, and made a number of suggestions to the commission on how they might better inform young people of the next one

Game Of 1971 Set For Boys Baseball

After three weeks of league play, Schaumburg Park District boys baseball team, the Sox, coached by Phil Parczyk lead the standings with a record of 9-0.

The Dolphins, coached by Frank Passaglia, hold a record of 8-1 placing them second.

The Sox and Dolphins are expected to pair off for play this week in what is expected to be the boys baseball game of 1971 in Schaumburg, according to park district officials.

Tied for third place in the league are the Giants and Orioles, followed by the Pirates in the fourth spot.

The Cubs and Reds are tied for fifth and Cardinals and Athletics both in sixth followed by the Braves in seventh place.

The boys league, organized by the park district last year, serves boys not accepted by Schaumburg Athletic Association for regular league play.

High School Girls In Softball League

With continued expansion of Schaumburg Park District's summer recreation program, a girls' high school softball team, the "Hard Rocks," has been started this year.

Team members compete with other girls groups from Roselle, Bloomingdale and Itasca and are vying for a traveling trophy purchased by the four participating park districts.

Sharon Mattioda, "Hard Rocks" coach, reports that thus far in their first season, the girls have won three and lost four games

Plans call for continuance of the team with expansion to a possible league proposed.

Practice is held each Tuesday and Thursday evening at James Falk Field which is adjacent to Nathan Hale Elementary School, Wise Road.

Lawyer Hits Firm's Strike Statements

The attorney representing striking machinist employes of Hunter Automated Machinery Corp. 2222 Hammond Dr., Schaumburg, Thursday rebutted comments made by a company lawyer relating to the strike.

The strike was called by Hunter employes who belong to Local 8, Industrial Workers Union, AFL, both to seek recognition of the local as collective bargaining agent and to protest alleged unfair labor practices by the company, said Joseph Cicero, whose legal office is in Chicago. The strike was called at a meeting of employes, who voted 12 to nothing to strike, said Cicero. Hunter has about 25 machinist employes, which the local seeks to represent.

From 40 to 42 pickets have been walking lines at the plant since July 23. Cicero said 18 of the pickets were Hunter employes. Of the remaining seven employes, some stayed home and only a few are working, claimed Cicero.

CICERO RELATED events leading to the strike, beginning July 1. He alleges the company that day took from 10 to 15 employes into the vice president's office "one by one, and said 'are you for us or are you for the union?' "

The firm "forced them to sign a card that said they were not interested" in unionizing, said Cicero. "Economic coercion" was used to convince the men to sign affidavits, and the men signed "because they were afraid for their jobs," alleges Cicero.

The attorney said he has presented his allegations to the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB), claiming a violation of NLRB guarantees that employes have the right to decide without coercion whether they wish to join unions.

ON JULY 12, said Cicero, the union requested company recognition of the local's right to represent the men in collective bargaining. The request was in a letter, which stated the union had the support of a majority of the employes. At that point, Hunter agreed to recognize the union if it could produce cards signed by a majority of employes stating they wished union representation, alleges Cicero. But on July 15, when Local 8 offered to produce the cards, the company refused them, he said.

Hunter's attorney, Don Lyon of Skokie, who is acting as company spokesman, said Monday the firm wanted the union to request a NLRB-supervised election, by secret ballot, which would show without question whether the employes actually want a union.

Cicero contends the union has "offered to go to a quick election, immediately, in the next two to four days." But "the only way that can be done is if the company files a petition with NLRB, and the company refused to do this," he said. If the union sought the election, there would be a delay of a minimum of 21 days, and possibly much longer, said Cicero.

Cicero also said he and representatives from Hunter had conferred in judicial chambers Wednesday in the Chicago Civic Center, concerning an effort by Hunter to obtain a court injunction to halt the strike. Cicero declined to name the judge with whom they conferred, but said no decision had been reached.

Deadline Donors Push Center Fund Over $10,000

The Herald's emergency fund to help save The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center has passed $10,000 — and additional donations are still coming in.

By Saturday, the fund had received a total $10,345 — $2,845 over the minimum goal of $7,500 required to keep the family service agency from curtailing service to Northwest suburbs.

The success of the appeal was met with rejoicing by staff members of the Center, headquartered at 1797 Oakton St., Des Plaines.

"The overwhelming response by the Northwest suburban area to the Herald's articles and editorials has been tremendous," said Mrs. Margaret Lisinski, district supervisor for The Salvation Army Center. "We are indeed deeply grateful for the community's interest and recognition for the need for the service and financial support.

"The emergency fund will enable us to keep the Center's present staff of social workers," she added, "and we will continue to be open five days and four nights a week."

THE CENTER IS the only professional family service agency available to suburbanites living in Des Plaines and Wheeling, Elk Grove, Palatine, and Schaumburg Townships.

To avoid a cutback in service to this area, the Center had to raise at last $7,500 by today. This goal represented one-half of the current $15,000 operating deficit. The balance is to be provided by a "matching grant" from a private foundation to be announced later this month by The Salvation Army in Chicago.

Center officials expressed hope that the "matching grant" will be increased to meet whatever total is contributed to the Herald emergency fund.

"To accommodate the large number of late donors, we are extending the fund drive deadline," said Charles E. Hayes, Herald editor in chief.

Donations may be sent to the Herald "Center Fund," P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. A final list of contributors will be published in Thursday's Herald.

The funds will be presented to the Center on Monday, Aug. 16 at a "victory" luncheon sponsored by the Herald.

AMONG MAJOR contributions made to the fund during the last few days were $177.65 from the Community Service Corps of Wheeling and Buffalo Grove, $100 from Bantam Books Inc., Des Plaines, and $100 from Peep's Hot Dogs, Arlington Heights.

Since the Herald fund was announced June 21, more than 1,000 readers have responded to the appeal. Support also has come from 24 Protestant and Catholic churches, seven service clubs, and several business firms.

If the foundation grant "matches" the fund total, the Center will be able to expand its present level of service as well as meet its 1971 deficit.

"We hope to secure enough money to add another full-time caseworker," explained Mrs. Lisinski, who added this would increase their present caseload capacity by 25 per cent.

You Can Still Help!

Contributions may still be made to The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center emergency fund.

Donations may be sent to Herald "Center Fund," P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. The final list of donors will be published in Thursday's Herald.

Hotline Fund Hits $1,900 With $1,500 Village Gift

The "hotline" fund for Wheeling, Buffalo Grove and Prospect Heights has grown to $1,900 since the donation of $1,500 last week by the Buffalo Grove Village Board.

"It was unbelievable. We're really getting there," said Ruth Wieder, member of the hotline committee, a sub-committee of HELP, Inc.

The idea behind the hotline project is to set up a telephone that would be manned around the clock by volunteers from the community. Persons could call the hotline for emergency counseling and referral to agencies which, in turn, could give specialized help to persons with social or emotional problems. HELP hopes to set up the hotline by Oct. 1.

With $1,900 now secure, the hotline committee has turned its attention to other avenues of fund raising. The Wheeling Board of Trustees finance committee will meet tonight to consider a possible contribution by that village.

Plans are also underway for "Hotline Day" on Aug. 27.

HELP MEMBERS plan to station themselves at shopping centers and intersections throughout the three communities on that day to solicit funds for the hotline.

Telephone key chains have been donated by Illinois Bell to be given as tags to those who contribute.

"We thought the telephone key chains seemed appropriate, as our program is geared around the phone," Mrs. Wieder said.

Contributions can be mailed to HELP's hotline project at P.O. Box 241 in Wheeling.

Mrs. Wieder said the budget needed to maintain the hotline project will depend on where office space can be located.

"If we have to rent space, our budget will run around $6,000 a year. We're looking for a cheaper location. If one could be donated, we would only have to pay for the phones and insurance."

She praised the estimated 200 young people in the three communities who have been helping to establish the hotline.

"SOME HAVE volunteered to man the hotline. Others are involved in our fund raising. They're doing a beautiful job."

The young people raised $100 by manning a hot dog stand in Wheeling a few weeks ago. They have also raised an estimated $150 from interviews about their likes and dislikes of various products by market research analysts, Mrs. Wieder stated.

STEEL BEAMS are pounded into place as work is started on the second floor of the addition to Booth Tarkington School in Wheeling. The $380,000 addition is scheduled for completion in December. It will include classrooms, a multi-purpose room, offices, teachers' lounge, learning center and nurse's room.

School Construction Projects Nearly On Schedule: Barger

Construction projects currently under way in School Dist 21 are close to being on schedule, according to Asst. Supt John Barger

The new James Whitcomb Riley School in the Northgate subdivision of Arlington Heights is completed, except for the grading of the grounds, Barger said. School equipment is now being moved into the elementary school, he added, in preparation for a September opening.

The new Nathaniel Hawthorne School in northern Wheeling will be finished next month, in time for the opening of fall classes.

"We had a delay on the window frames, which put Hawthorne a little behind schedule, but these are now being installed," Barger said. "The exterior of the building is entirely complete. Most of the interior painting has been completed and the cabinets installed," he said.

Remaining work on the building includes installation of light fixtures, laying of tile floors and completion of work on the ceilings, he said.

THE SCHOOL grounds also have to be graded, the assistant superintendent said.

Two other building projects slated for completion in December are also on schedule. These are the additions to Booth Tarkington School in Wheeling and the Dist. 21 Administration Building, also in Wheeling.

The first floor exterior work on both additions is being completed and workmen are now beginning to start exterior work on the second floor of both projects, according to Barger.

The administration building addition will include office space and the Tarkington addition will include classrooms for both regular and special education instruction, offices, multi-purpose room, library resource center, teacher's lounge and nurse's office.

No Progress Made In Contract Talks

Negotiators were unable to agree on a new Dist. 21 teacher contract for fiscal 1971-72 at Wednesday's negotiations session between teachers and administration and school board members.

Members of the school board administration negotiating team and the Dist. 21 faculty council negotiators did agree to hold further sessions in coming weeks.

The Wednesday session was the second this month held between the two groups.

The main area in dispute centers on the method to be used to determine teachers salaries. The teachers favor use of the index system, which bases all salaries on the salary paid a beginning teacher in the district.

The school board and administration favor the increment system, in which the salaries paid experienced teachers may have no relation to the salary paid a beginning teacher.

Need Homes For Chicago Kids

There's more children from Chicago who want to spend some time in the Northwest suburbs than there are suburbanites willing to open their homes for a couple of weeks.

The 1971 Friendly Town program now in its second session of the summer still needs suburban families to host several inner-city children for a period of two weeks.

Before the first session which ran from July 11 to 25 about 30 children were called and told they couldn't come, according to Mrs. Betty Ginger, Rolling Meadows.

"We just didn't have any place they could go," she said.

"IT'S KIND OF hard to call a kid who's ready to leave tomorrow and tell him he'll have to wait or maybe not come at all," she added.

Mrs. Ginger and Mrs. Mary Ann Reiter of Arlington Heights are the organizers of the program which arranges for the inner-city children to visit with suburban host families.

Some of the 30 children who missed out on the first session of the Friendly Town program now are visiting in the area for the second session. But several children still need a place to stay.

For the first time since the program was started a third session has been scheduled running from Aug. 8 to 22.

"But we're willing to make exceptions, if those dates aren't acceptable to a family, who's willing to take a child," Mrs. Ginger said.

"IF THE KIDS don't go at the convenience of the host they don't go at all, so we really don't have a choice," she added.

This year the majority of children involved in the program will come through the Faith Community Church on Chicago's west side. Host families are asked to go to the church on Sunday morning to pick up their guest.

Friendly Town children are given a medical exam before their visits. They also are covered by a $2,500 sickness and accident policy during their visits.

To be eligible, a family must provide their own personal liability insurance, included in most homeowner's policies, and be willing to furnish a personal reference.

FAMILIES WITH no children at home and those who have only infants are asked to request two children. Past experience indicates that Friendly Town children who are used to large families, and crowded neighborhoods are happier when they are near children their own ages to play with.

Host families will receive the name of their assigned children about two days before the session begins. They are asked to contact the child and his family immediately to introduce themselves and ease any of the child's fear.

For further information or to make application for a Friendly Town child, call Mrs. Ginger at 259-1188 or Mrs. Reiter at 392-2654.

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

The Senate is beginning its final week before Congress' long summer recess faced with critical measures to extend the draft and insure the nation's largest defense contractor against bankruptcy. Senators must decide whether to revive the draft which expired July 1 and whether to guarantee repayment of $250 million in bank loans to Lockheed Aircraft Corp. Floor leaders advised Senate members to be prepared for late night sessions, not only to deal with these crucial measures, but possibly to take action to end a nationwide rail strike and approve an overhaul of regulations controlling political campaign spending.

The steel workers are seeking a pact providing a 30 per cent pay increase over three years — about the same wage package won earlier this year from the aluminum, can and copper industries.

For Those Away From Home

AGENCIES RESPONSIBLE for maintaining Arlington Heights Road will attempt to have the road maintained by the Cook County Highway Department. The decision to attempt to have the road reclassified as an extension of a county highway was reached at a meeting of representatives of various villages and townships now held responsible for maintaining the road. The meeting was held in Buffalo Grove.

Buffalo Grove Village Mgr. Daniel Larson said that a portion of the road in Buffalo Grove may be barricaded because of its poor condition if the county does not agree to assume responsibility for its upkeep.

THE CORONETS, the largest girls drill team in the country and state champs, displayed their award- winning style Saturday.

Coronets Take State Title Again

For the eighth consecutive year, the Coronets senior girls drill team Saturday successfully defended their state championship title.

Composed of high school aged girls from High School Dist. 214, the 84-member drill team placed first in the State American Legion Championship held at Elk Grove High School.

Competing against nine other senior drill teams from across Illinois, the Coronets scored 87.9 out of 100 possible points. The closest runner up was the R-Lettes, defending national champions from Round Lake, with a score of 78.2.

The Coronets are directed by Mr. and Mrs. George Lindstrom of Kenosha, Wis. and assisted by the squad's three captains, Nancee Dally, Sue Pace and Sharon Shields.

Co-sponsored by the Arlington Heights Elks Club, V.F.W. Post 981 and the American Legion Merle Guild Post, the Coronets will travel to Dallas, Texas, Aug. 16 to compete for the National Championship, which they won twice before, and most recently, two years ago in Miami, Fla.

In other events at this weekend's competition, the Cavaliers, a Chicago-based group which has won over 426 first place awards including five national championships since being organized in 1948, captured the senior division drum and bugle corps competition.

The Guardsmen, a drum and bugle corps from Mount Prospect, placed fifth.

Pollce Nab Driver In Speedy Chase

Buffalo Grove police raced through Lake County at speeds of more than 100 mph in pursuit of an auto driven by a Des Plaines man.

The chase ended when the car pulled into a driveway of a Mundelein home and the driver dashed into a house. Several minutes later the man strolled from the house and complained that police were towing his car away.

Policemen Ralph Wagner and Arthur Voight spotted the car speeding north on Rte 83 at Busch Road in Buffalo Grove at 4 30 Friday morning. Their radar showed the car was going 94 mph, police said

The policemen began following the car which slowed down after spotting the police car At Arlington Heights Road, police said the car suddenly accelerated and was quickly going 110 mph.

WITH LIGHTS flashing and siren wailing, the two policemen chased the car north on Rte. 83 The car raced through a stop sign at Rte. 22 without slowing down, police said

Still going more than 100 mph, the car sped through a green traffic light at Routes 83 and 45 and through a red light at routes 45 and 60, police said. Cars on the cross streets dodged to avoid the speeder

During the chase Voight and Wagner alerted Mundelein police and the Lake County sheriff's office via radio. Although the Buffalo Grove police radio band is not connected with those police departments, the policemen were able to reach them using a second radio, an "Espern" radio which connects local police departments through a special state police hookup.

As the car sped north through a residential area along Rte. 45, Mundelein police pulled a squad car across the highway at Allison Road. The driver spotted the flashing lights of the Mundelein police car and swerved into a gas station to avoid it The car then raced down Allison Road and into a driveway at 311 Allison Rd., police said.

THEY SAID THE driver ran from the car and into the house. However, when police knocked on the door, the residents said no member of their family had been driving the car.

Identification belonging to John Parish, 21, of 1330 Rand Rd., Des Plaines was found in the car, and the residents said Parish had recently moved from the house. Neighbors said the car was his.

As a tow truck began to tow the car away, police said Parish, who had apparently used an old key to enter the house and hide, walked out and asked what was happening. Later, police said he admitted he had been driving the car.

Parish was arrested and charged with speeding, reckless driving, eluding police, running a stop sign and running a red light.

Czech Makes His Own 'Great Escape'

by TOM VON MALDER

It sounded like any one of a hundred movie escapes from behind the Iron Curtain, complete with the escapee hanging from the undercarriage of a streaking train.

But it wasn't. It was real and it happened to George Lippert 18 years ago.

"I don't know about it being like the movies," Lippert said in a recent interview, while recalling his adventure. "I only know I wouldn't want to do it a second time. I don't know if I could."

Lippert, who lives at 1301 Cottonwood Ln. in Mount Prospect, was born in Prauge, Czechoslovakia in 1921. He vividly remembers the 1938 Munich agreement by which France and Great Britain gave his Czechoslovakia to Hitler and the Nazis.

"I got married in 1944," Lippert said. "It was after the war, in 1945, that I became an active member of the anti-Communist party, called the Beles Party after our president."

BUT IT WASN'T until 1949 that Lippert got into serious trouble with the Communist regime.

"I openly voted against the Communists in 1949 and was placed on their blacklist," Lippert said. The next year, Lippert was kicked out of his job as a chemist because "I didn't have a positive approach to the Communist regime."

The soft-spoken former refugee took a puff on his cigarette. "There was nothing I could do. They suggested I go to work in the coal mines."

But, with the help of a friend, he managed to avoid the mine pits and get a job as a buyer in the steel industry.

The period of respite for Lippert was short however. In the spring of 1953, he received a secret message from a member of the Communist-controlled labor union. "The message said that my days over there are counted."

THIS MESSAGE forced a decision and the decision was to escape. "I knew it was impossible for my whole family to escape as at that time Czechoslovakia was blocked from all sides. But by listening to Radio Free Europe I got the impression that in two to three years the Communist regime would be over. Then I could come back."

Yet, once the decision to escape had been made, it could never be certain that he would return or even make it out of the country. So, Lippert and his wife got a divorce, with her taking care of their two children.

Since it was impossible to get to West Germany directly at that time, the plan was to go over the border to East Germany. This was in July.

"At the border I could see the soldier and hear the dogs about 200 yards away. I laid down on the ground. I had brought some black pepper which I spread around my resting place."

The pepper was to throw the dogs off his scent. "The pepper saved my life," Lippert said. He was then free to move across the border into East Berlin.

"They came from one side only so I was able to climb under the car until the next station," Lippert said. The next station was some 50 miles and 30 minutes away.

Once back in the train, Lippert had only a short ride before another patrol boarded the train. This time it was the East Germans.

"These were regular patrols. But when the Germans came on I had no choice but to face them. They came from both sides and I was in the middle with nowhere to go.

"I still recall they asked for the identification card of the man next to me and the woman across from me. I had already given up. It was just plain luck."

The guards left without asking to see a card from Lippert, who had none.

The train reached East Berlin without further incident. There Lippert was shocked to see the buildings still bombed out. "I could only orientate myself by watching the sun go down. I couldn't recognize anything."

The sun went down — to the west, Lippert's goal. He walked to the Brandenberg Gate. There was no wall yet dividing the city, but barbed wire and armed guards had the same effect. Lippert could not get across to West Berlin.

"THERE I WAS completely Lost. So I decided to go ask somebody to help me."

The time was about 5 p.m. and Lippert began walking through the park, trying to judge people by their faces. He picked out an old man and "in my broken German I asked for help to get to West Berlin."

The man advised him to sit and wait until the next morning at 4 a.m. when the border would be opened again.

"This changed my opinion of Germany. From my childhood I had been brought up to hate the Germans and their 300 years of control over my people. It was amazing for me. I realized then there were only good and bad people."

He later met a woman who asked if he were trying to cross the border. Lipoert said that in his naivete he told her the truth. She told him she too was waiting to cross and they spent the next lonely, frightening hours together.

The next morning, after hiding from patrols among crowds all night long, they separated with Lippert taking the elevated train to West Berlin. Once there he tried to get a policeman's attention by changing his clothes and swimming in a public fountain.

"I thought one had to do something wrong to get a policeman's attention," Lippert laughed.

When he went to the Canadian embassy, there were so many other refugees ahead of him that he was taken to the American Army Intelligence service. Six weeks with them, three with the British and three with the French, as the Allies tried to learn as much as possible from Lippert about conditions in Czechoslovakia.

AT ONE POINT, the French intelligence service asked Lippert to become a spy for them and carry secret codes back to his country. In return, they offered him immediate passage to the United States. Otherwise he faced a two-year waiting period.

Lippert said he refused when he learned that agents were being sent over with false codes. Arrangements were made by the French to have the Czechs capture these agents so they would be confused by the false codes.

Before coming to the United States, Lippert worked for the U.S. refugee program in West Berlin and Munich. He married again in 1958 to Edith, a German girl. In January 1956, he entered this country and settled in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Edith followed later.

The couple now have a five-year-old son, Erik. They moved to Arlington Heights in 1961 when Lippert was offered a job at Pre-Finished Metals in Elk Grove Village, his first job as a chemist since being black-listed by the Communists in 1950.

The Lipperts also have lived in Park Ridge and will shortly move to Schaumburg.

Back in 1968, Lippert helped his son, George, escape. He is now an electronic engineer in San Francisco. The other child from his first marriage, Donna, got as far as Munich where she met and fell in love with a German boy. Lippert's first wife had no desire to leave Czechoslovakia, he said.

She Started Her Own School

by BETSY BROOKER

Laughter and eager voices echo from the yard behind the two-story white frame house A child darts from a garage in a paint-smeared smock and disappears through the back door In the garage, children and toys have crowded out a Buick and an assortment of lawn tools

Four children are grouped around a small table in the garage and are blowing through straws at blobs of paint smeared on sheets of white paper. As they blow, the paint swirls and mixes with more paint, forming a psychedelic pattern

A lone boy sits at another table industriously drawing a portrait of "my house" with colored crayons. Two other children take turns swinging on an old tire hung from a tree branch while a third inspects a bookcase filled with games and puzzles.

An adult voice calls the children into the house where they beeline for a phonograph in the corner of the living room It is the end of the "free play" period and time for a music lesson.

THE CHILDREN are all students at a nursery school in Prospect Heights. Their teacher is Kathy Wingert. Six months ago, after a futile search for a "good, economical school close to home," Kathy decided to start her own nursery school. A teacher by profession, Kathy is now studying for her doctorate in reading education.

Her do-it-yourself project has developed into a full-fledged school that uses a mixture of Jean Piaget, Maria Montessori and Sesame Street teaching techniques.

Kathy describes the school as a "cooperative." None of the students pay an attendance fee, but all of the mothers pitch in and make teaching materials, organize games and drive the children on field trips.

While the school is housed in Kathy's garage during the summer, it is moved from home to home during the regular school year. The mothers take turns teaching the children, going to Kathy for technical advice. Kathy's co-teachers in the non-certified school are Carol Williams, Lenore Collins, Diane Guarniere, Grace Wagner, Anne Thornes, Kathy Huber, Debbie Tracy and Carol Peterson.

It all began with an off hand remark from her husband Roger. Kathy had complained that she wasn't satisfied with any of the nursery schools in the area, with the exception of the Montessori School which she said was too expensive. Roger's reply was, "I bet you could do a better job yourself."

"I MADE A FEW telephone calls to people in the community who I knew had pre-schoolers," said Kathy. "Most of the mothers were very excited about the idea of starting our own nursery school. We all share a common problem. Because of the large house lots and absence of sidewalks in this area, most of our preschoolers do not have playmates within walking distance."

The mothers met at Kathy's home and discussed their problem. They decided they wanted to give their children an opportunity to associate with others their own age. And they wanted to give their children a "challenging" opportunity to learn before they enter kindergarten.

As one mother put it, "We weren't interested in the expensive babysitting service offered by most commercial nursery schools."

After the meeting Kathy began visiting libraries to study the current trends in pre-school education.

ANOTHER MEETING of the mothers and an examination of the information compiled by Kathy resulted in a set of lesson plans. Each plan is designed to introduce the child to a subject, such as 'animals,' and a thought process, such as shapes. At the end of the 10-week spring session the children had discussed such subjects as gardens and air and had learned about colors, sizes, numbers, and letters.

To facilitate the children's lessons, the mothers made a variety of teaching tools. Playing cards cut into different shapes and covered with different colored tapes teach the children to name shapes and colors. The children identify numbers with the help of corduroy numerals pasted onto cardboard cards.

Long strips of paper, with a different number of blocks on each, are matched with numerals drawn on small paper squares. A "grab bag" is used to teach the children to identify objects while blindfolded, using the sense of touch.

The purpose of the teaching tools is to make learning fun, according to Kathy. "We give the children the freedom of choice and don't force them to learn. We've had no discipline problems. The children look forward to going to school."

Rezoning Request Denied By Board

The Wheeling Village Board last week voted to deny a rezoning request to allow construction of a furniture store at the southwest corner of the intersection of Dundee and Wheeling roads.

The Wickes Corp. had sought the zoning change from I-2 to B-2. Last month the Wheeling Zoning Board of Appeals voted against recommending the rezoning.

Representatives of the Wickes Corp. said they planned to purchase the 30 acres of land from the G. D. Searle Co. if the rezoning was granted.

About 11 acres would be used for the store and the remainder of the land would be sold, they said. The rezoning was being requested for only the 11 acres that would be needed for the store, they added.

Board To Discuss School Referendum

A special meeting of the Dist. 96 school board will be held at 8 p.m. this evening to discuss plans for the Sept. 25 building referendum in the district.

Last month the school board approved holding the referendum on Sept. 25. The referendum will ask for voter approval to construct a third school in the district. The school would be built with funds from district bonds and a loan from the Illinois School Building Commission.

Deadline Donors Push Center Fund Over $10,000

The Herald's emergency fund to help save The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center has passed $10,000 — and additional donations are still coming in.

By Saturday, the fund had received a total $10,345 — $2,845 over the minimum goal of $7,500 required to keep the family service agency from curtailing service to Northwest suburbs.

The success of the appeal was met with rejoicing by staff members of the Center, headquartered at 1797 Oakton St., Des Plaines.

"The overwhelming response by the Northwest suburban area to the Herald's articles and editorials has been tremendous," said Mrs. Margaret Lisinski, district supervisor for The Salvation Army Center. "We are indeed deeply grateful for the community's interest and recognition for the need for the service and financial support.

"The emergency fund will enable us to keep the Center's present staff of social workers," she added, "and we will continue to be open five days and four nights a week."

THE CENTER IS the only professional family service agency available to suburbanites living in Des Plaines and Wheeling, Elk Grove, Palatine, and Schaumburg Townships.

To avoid a cutback in service to this area, the Center had to raise at last $7,500 by today. This goal represented one-half of the current $15,000 operating deficit. The balance is to be provided by a "matching grant" from a private foundation to be announced later this month by The Salvation Army in Chicago.

Center officials expressed hope that the "matching grant" will be increased to meet whatever total is contributed to the Herald emergency fund.

"To accommodate the large number of late donors, we are extending the fund drive deadline," said Charles E. Hayes, Herald editor in chief.

Donations may be sent to the Herald "Center Fund," P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. A final list of contributors will be published in Thursday's Herald.

The funds will be presented to the Center on Monday, Aug. 16 at a "victory" luncheon sponsored by the Herald.

AMONG MAJOR contributions made to the fund during the last few days were $177.65 from the Community Service Corps of Wheeling and Buffalo Grove, $100 from Bantam Books Inc., Des Plaines, and $100 from Peep's Hot Dogs, Arlington Heights.

Since the Herald fund was announced June 21, more than 1,800 readers have responded to the appeal. Support also has come from 24 Protestant and Catholic churches, seven service clubs, and several business firms.

If the foundation grant "matches" the fund total, the Center will be able to expand its present level of service as well as meet its 1971 deficit.

"We hope to secure enough money to add another full-time caseworker," explained Mrs. Lisinski, who added this would increase their present caseload capacity by 25 per cent.

You Can Still Help!

Contributions may still be made to The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center emergency fund.

Development Commission Starts 'Village Profile'

Buffalo Grove's new Economic Development Commission has decided to begin work by preparing a "profile" of the village.

The profile would describe the village's "assets" — including schools, income and educational levels, churches, businesses — and eventually would be used to attract business and industry.

However, the idea originated when a commission member, Chuck Junkunc, asked, "Do you know what we have, has anyone taken an inventory of our assets?"

William Rose, commission chairman and a former chairman of the state's economic development commission, agreed that a "profile of the community" was needed, and village manager Daniel Larson suggested that the commission try to find a community organization to draw up the profile.

Larson said that while his office could compile the profile, community involvement would benefit the commission. Rose agreed and said that "without the community, we're working in a vacuum."

The meeting ended with commission members still undecided about what organization could work on the document. The profile was made the first topic of business for next commission meeting to be held at 8 p.m. Aug. 12 in the village municipal building.

THE COMMISSION'S first meeting, held last Thursday night, began with Trustee Charles Vogt telling commission that Buffalo Grove is "basically a bedroom community" and that it would be "nice to have an additional tax base."

"Instead of having to go to Arlington Heights and Wheeling for services," Vogt said, "we should have them here. We need offices or light industry, or whatever, to provide the tax base so we can offer these services."

Rose said that from his experience on the state level, "One of the most important tasks is to get community input, to keep the community informed about what we're doing and why."

"I hate covert planning," Rose said and added that public meetings, including meetings with community organizations, are important even though they "may lead to people opposing industry."

Commission members spent much of the meeting questioning Larson and Vogt about the village and Rose about economic development.

D. J. Krocko asked about plans for public transportation in the area and pointed out that businesses in other suburbs have problems getting factory and clerical help to and from work.

LARSON said that a six-county public transportation agency had been proposed for the Chicago area, but has not been approved by the legislature.

Milt Cummings asked about the possibility of using tax incentives to lure industry, but Rose said that tax incentives are usually used by cities that want to cut down on unemployment.

STEEL BEAMS are pounded into place as work is started on the second floor of the addition to Booth Tarkington School in Wheeling. The $380,000 addition is scheduled for completion in December. It will include classrooms, a multi-purpose room, offices, teachers' lounge, learning center and nurse's room.

School Construction Projects Nearly On Schedule: Barger

Construction projects currently under way in School Dist. 21 are close to being on schedule, according to Asst. Supt John Barger.

The new James Whitcomb Riley School in the Northgate subdivision of Arlington Heights is completed, except for the grading of the grounds, Barger said. School equipment is now being moved into the elementary school, he added, in preparation for a September opening.

The new Nathaniel Hawthorne School in northern Wheeling will be finished next month, in time for the opening of fall classes.

"We had a delay on the window frames, which put Hawthorne a little behind schedule, but these are now being installed," Barger said. "The exterior of the building is entirely complete. Most of the interior painting has been completed and the cabinets installed," he said.

Remaining work on the building includes installation of light fixtures, laying of tile floors and completion of work on the ceilings, he said.

THE SCHOOL grounds also have to be graded, the assistant superintendent said.

Two other building projects slated for completion in December are also on schedule. These are the additions to Booth Tarkington School in Wheeling and the Dist. 21 Administration Building, also in Wheeling.

The first floor exterior work on both additions is being completed and workmen are now beginning to start exterior work on the second floor of both projects, according to Barger.

The administration building addition will include office space and the Tarkington addition will include classrooms for both regular and special education instruction, offices, multi-purpose room, library resource center, teacher's lounge and nurse's office.

Board To Review Building Plans

The Buffalo Grove Village Board is to review plans and construction schedules and authorize bids for repairs of Checker Road, St. Mary's Parkway, Bernard Drive and Raupp Boulevard at its regular meeting tonight.

The board's agenda also includes consideration of a proposal for a new fire station and authorization of bids for a jeep and one-ton dump truck for the public works department

Need Homes For Chicago Kids

There's more children from Chicago who want to spend some time in the Northwest suburbs than there are suburbanites willing to open their homes for a couple of weeks.

The 1971 Friendly Town program now in its second session of the summer still needs suburban families to host several inner-city children for a period of two weeks.

Before the first session which ran from July 11 to 25 about 30 children were called and told they couldn't come, according to Mrs. Betty Ginger, Rolling Meadows.

"We just didn't have any place they could go," she said.

"IT'S KIND OF hard to call a kid who's ready to leave tomorrow and tell him he'll have to wait or maybe not come at all," she added.

Mrs. Ginger and Mrs. Mary Ann Reiter of Arlington Heights are the organizers of the program which arranges for the inner-city children to visit with suburban host families.

Some of the 30 children who missed out on the first session of the Friendly Town program now are visiting in the area for the second session. But several children still need a place to stay.

For the first time since the program was started a third session has been scheduled running from Aug. 8 to 22.

"But we're willing to make exceptions, if those dates aren't acceptable to a family who's willing to take a child," Mrs. Ginger said.

"IF THE KIDS don't go at the convenience of the host they don't go at all, so we really don't have a choice," she added.

This year the majority of children involved in the program will come through the Faith Community Church on Chicago's west side. Host families are asked to go to the church on Sunday morning to pick up their guest.

Friendly Town children are given a medical exam before their visits. They also are covered by a $2,500 sickness and accident policy during their visits.

To be eligible, a family must provide their own personal liability insurance, included in most homeowner's policies, and be willing to furnish a personal reference.

FAMILIES WITH no children at home and those who have only infants are asked to request two children. Past experience indicates that Friendly Town children who are used to large families, and crowded neighborhoods are happier when they are near children their own ages to play with.

Host families will receive the name of their assigned children about two days before the session begins. They are asked to contact the child and his family immediately to introduce themselves and ease any of the child's fear.

For further information or to make application for a Friendly Town child, call Mrs. Ginger at 259-1188 or Mrs. Reiter at 392-2654.

The Nation

The Senate is beginning its final week before Congress' long summer recess faced with critical measures to extend the draft and insure the nation's largest defense contractor against bankruptcy. Senators must decide whether to revive the draft which expired July 1 and whether to guarantee repayment of $250 million in bank loans to Lockheed Aircraft Corp. Floor leaders advised Senate members to be prepared for late night sessions, not only to deal with these crucial measures, but possibly to take action to end a nationwide rail strike and approve an overhaul of regulations controlling political campaign spending.

Deadline Donors Push Center Fund Over $10,000

The Herald's emergency fund to help save The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center has passed $10,000 — and additional donations are still coming in.

By Saturday, the fund had received a total $10,345 — $2,845 over the minimum goal of $7,500 required to keep the family service agency from curtailing service to Northwest suburbs.

The success of the appeal was met with rejoicing by staff members of the Center, headquartered at 1797 Oakton St., Des Plaines.

"The overwhelming response by the Northwest suburban area to the Herald's articles and editorials has been tremendous," said Mrs. Margaret Lisinski, district supervisor for The Salvation Army Center. "We are indeed deeply grateful for the community's interest and recognition for the need for the service and financial support.

"The emergency fund will enable us to keep the Center's present staff of social workers," she added, "and we will continue to be open five days and four nights a week."

THE CENTER IS the only professional family service agency available to suburbanites living in Des Plaines and Wheeling, Elk Grove, Palatine, and Schaumburg Townships.

To avoid a cutback in service to this area, the Center had to raise at last $7,500 by today. This goal represented one-half of the current $15,000 operating deficit. The balance is to be provided by a "matching grant" from a private foundation to be announced later this month by The Salvation Army in Chicago.

Center officials expressed hope that the "matching grant" will be increased to meet whatever total is contributed to the Herald emergency fund.

"To accommodate the large number of late donors, we are extending the fund drive deadline," said Charles E. Hayes, Herald editor in chief.

Donations may be sent to the Herald "Center Fund," P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. A final list of contributors will be published in Thursday's Herald.

The funds will be presented to the Center on Monday, Aug. 16 at a "victory" luncheon sponsored by the Herald.

AMONG MAJOR contributions made to the fund during the last few days were $177.65 from the Community Service Corps of Wheeling and Buffalo Grove, $100 from Bantam Books Inc., Des Plaines, and $100 from Peep's Hot Dogs, Arlington Heights.

Since the Herald fund was announced June 21, more than 1,800 readers have responded to the appeal. Support also has come from 24 Protestant and Catholic churches, seven service clubs, and several business firms.

If the foundation grant "matches" the fund total, the Center will be able to expand its present level of service as well as meet its 1971 deficit.

"We hope to secure enough money to add another full-time caseworker," explained Mrs. Lisinski, who added this would increase their present caseload capacity by 25 per cent.

Village Incumbent Party Is Alive— With New Name

The Village Incumbent Party (VIP) is alive, organized and living in Palatine, but with a new name.

Some 25 residents who had been active with the VIPs in April's election met Thursday to change the group's name to the Village Independent Party and establish a 9-man board of directors to coordinate the party's activities.

Elected president of the new VIPs was Tom Kearns, past village trustee who ran with the VIPs in April but was defeated in his bid for reelection. Kearns was the only VIP to be defeated in the election.

The 9-man board will be composed of five representatives with two-year terms and four with one-year terms.

Elected vice president of the group was Roger Bjorvik, who was campaign coordinator for the VIPs in April. Donald Diedrich, finance director during the campaign, was elected treasurer and Mrs. Peggy Leferre, who is active in the League of Women Voters, was elected secretary

OTHERS ELECTED to the board were Harry Croft, Barney O'Neil, Terry Leighty, Don Parotto and David Kuh. Croft, Leighty, Diedrich and Bjorvik will all serve one-year terms while the others will serve the two-year terms.

Prior to selecting the board and officers, the group debated whether the VIPs should continue as a local political party or disband and reactivate itself nearer the next local election in two years.

Leighty, who was acting president of the group, suggested two reasons to continue the party: to involve more residents in local government, regardless of their political affiliation, and to develop a better form of candidate selection, which was one of the VIP's campaign promises.

"We ought to have an independent village party that will be concerned first about the affairs of the village," said Trustee Fred Zajonc, who successfully ran on the VIP ticket in April. "We have an obligation to continue the party."

Several at the meeting objected to national party politics in local elections. "I would like to find a way to remove the stigma of national parties," Jack Scollay said. "Locally, such parties are unimportant."

HOWEVER, DAVID YEATS, past village president who was involved with the United Citizens Party, an independent group during the 1967 campaign, said he did not think an independent party would work, although he agreed with the "theory in principle."

"We tried hard to get mass community involvement in the selection of candidates before, but it just didn't work out," Yeats said. "In any election, you immediately have the choosing up of political sides before any issues can be presented."

Yeats suggested the "only effective way of getting mass community participation in candidate selection" was through the caucus system, "but that doesn't always work out either."

Faced with the alternatives of disbanding or continuing, the group voted to formerly organize as a political party and established a study group to report back to full group with recommendations for further action.

"If we quit now, we're gong to give it right back to the Republicans on a silver platter," Don Parotto said. "I say continue the party."

HAVING RUN FOR OFFICE with both the Republican Party and the VIPs, Tom Kearns said he has received a "broader aspect" of the village.

"This group will run into a wall when opposing a group like the Republican Party if you don't lay groundwork first," Kearns said. "We need to have a nucleus for an ongoing party so that we can plan ahead."

After voting to continue the VIPs, the party agreed to change the name. "In April we had a cause and we tied the name into the incumbents," Leighty said. "But Village Independent Party is more appropriate and more descriptive."

The new VIPs also agreed to sponsor a picnic Sept. 12 at Area Four in Deer Grove. The picnic, which will begin around noon, will be free and picnickers should bring their own food. Games and prizes will be available for the children and a baseball game between the north vs. the south sides of the village will be featured.

DURING THE WEEKEND downtown Palatine didn't look quite the same as merchants took to the streets with their goods for Sidewalk Days. Children enjoyed the switch too as Glenn Vanco ponders his new plaything.

Village Board To Eye Storm Detention Rule

New storm detention requirements set up by the Metropolitan Sanitary District which will have an effect on Palatine will be discussed by the committee of the whole at the Palatine Village Board meeting at 8 tonight.

A report by the village engineering firm Consoer, Townsend and Associates will also be presented to explain to the board what the new requirements will mean to the village.

The committee of the whole will also discuss the 1971 tax levy ordinance for the village of Palatine, which is projected to provide a tax rate of .5535 compared to the 1970 rate of .5364. The tax rates are based on an assumption that the village's assessed valuation will be $102 million compared to the 1970 valuation of about $97.2 million.

The village board will also consider several requests for zoning variations, including an amendment to amend the zoning ordinance to allow particular indoor recreational uses as special uses in a B-2 district.

Township Board To Eye Sewage Study

A report on the feasibility study for a Palatine Township-sponsored sewer system for Lake Park Estates is expected to be made at the township board of auditor's meeting Monday night.

Howard Olsen, township supervisor, said the study will be released at a special meeting Saturday morning between the board and the Lake Park Homeowners' Association.

Olsen said a general question and answer session will follow the presentation of the study, which was made by a private engineering firm.

Indoor Swim Pool Needed

When annual floods strike Palatine and Rolling Meadows, few residents appreciate the sight of water.

But there's one area around here where most people probably would like to see water and which right now is as dry as a bone.

Aside from a few water fights near the drinking fountains in local schools, students in the area have had absolutely no access to water facilities during the school year. Specifically, they've had no access to swimming pools.

Only during the summer, when the park district pools and back yard pools are filled can youngsters swim, or more important, learn to swim. Although a few indoor pools are open in the surrounding areas at park districts and YMCAs, Palatine and Rolling Meadows have nothing for nine months of the year.

Not one of the high schools in Dist. 211 has an indoor pool for the students. Rolling Meadows High School is being built without a pool. Elementary School Dist. 15 has no pool facilities at any of its 19 schools.

High costs of pool construction have prevented school districts from providing pools in the past, although some cooperative efforts exist in other areas with park districts for use of indoor pools. All attempts in this area to work out similar efforts for pool facilities between parks and school has failed.

WITH MODULAR SCHEDULING beginning at Sanborn School in the fall, a more flexible method of breaking up the time in each school day will be created which will allow for a variety of new activities.

A hope of one of the teachers at Sanborn is to make swimming one of the school year activities.

Mark Swanson, a science teacher at Sanborn, is also a qualified instructor of swimming with the American Red Cross lifesaving and water safety program. It is his idea to structure some of the 20-minute "mods" in the modular scheduling to develop a swimming program

Obviously, his main problem is finding a pool. His only possibilities lie with Harper Junior College and with local apartment complexes that house pools.

In researching the proposition of getting a swimming program started, Swanson found out that any private organization which donates the use of a pool to the school district would receive tax deductions and benefits. There would also be no liability incurred by the owner of the pool because the swimming would be a regular part of the school day.

THERE ARE A NUMBER of complications that would arise through such a swimming program, such as transportation and additional expenses to the school district. However, participation of interested parents through PTA could take care of some of the obstacles.

Swanson is still open to suggestions about his swimming proposal and would welcome cooperation of area pool owners. However, swimming is just one of many additional activities the modular scheduling makes available to students and teachers.

Giving students options for classroom activities and permitting them to make their own choices contribute to the individual development of the child. Giving them the chance to participate in year-round swimming will also contribute to the physical well being of every child in the program.

Czech Makes His Own 'Great Escape'

by TOM VON MALDER

It sounded like any one of a hundred movie escapes from behind the Iron Curtain, complete with the escapee hanging from the undercarriage of a streaking train.

But it wasn't. It was real and it happened to George Lippert 18 years ago.

"I don't know about it being like the movies," Lippert said in a recent interview, while recalling his adventure. "I only know I wouldn't want to do it a second time. I don't know if I could."

Lippert, who lives at 1301 Cottonwood Ln. in Mount Prospect, was born in Prauge, Czechoslovakia in 1921. He vividly remembers the 1938 Munich agreement by which France and Great Britain gave his Czechoslovakia to Hitler and the Nazis.

"I got married in 1944," Lippert said. "It was after the war, in 1945, that I became an active member of the anti-Communist party, called the Beles Party after our president."

BUT IT WASN'T until 1949 that Lippert got into serious trouble with the Communist regime.

"I openly voted against the Communists in 1949 and was placed on their blacklist," Lippert said. The next year, Lippert was kicked out of his job as a chemist because "I didn't have a positive approach to the Communist regime."

The soft-spoken former refugee took a puff on his cigarette. "There was nothing I could do. They suggested I go to work in the coal mines."

But, with the help of a friend, he managed to avoid the mine pits and get a job as a buyer in the steel industry.

The period of respite for Lippert was short however. In the spring of 1953, he received a secret message from a member of the Communist-controlled labor union. "The message said that my days over there are counted."

THIS MESSAGE forced a decision and the decision was to escape. "I knew it was impossible for my whole family to escape as at that time Czechoslovakia was blocked from all sides. But by listening to Radio Free Europe I got the impression that in two to three years the Communist regime would be over. Then I could come back."

GEORGE LIPPERT recalls his 1953 escape from Communist Czechoslovakia. "When I first came to the United States, I found it hard to adjust. I wanted to go back immediately. Fortunately, I didn't have the money."

Yet, once the decision to escape had been made, it could never be certain that he would return or even make it out of the country. So, Lippert and his wife got a divorce, with her taking care of their two children.

Since it was impossible to get to West Germany directly at that time, the plan was to go over the border to East Germany. This was in July.

"At the border I could see the soldier and hear the dogs about 200 yards away. I laid down on the ground. I had brought some black pepper which I spread around my resting place."

The pepper was to throw the dogs off his scent. "The pepper saved my life," Lippert said. He was then free to move across the border into East Berlin.

"They came from one side only so I was able to climb under the car until the next station," Lippert said. The next station was some 50 miles and 30 minutes away.

Once back in the train, Lippert had only a short ride before another patrol boarded the train. This time it was the East Germans.

"These were regular patrols. But when the Germans came on I had no choice but to face them. They came from both sides and I was in the middle with nowhere to go.

"I still recall they asked for the identification card of the man next to me and the woman across from me. I had already given up. It was just plain luck."

The guards left without asking to see a card from Lippert, who had none.

The train reached East Berlin without further incident. There Lippert was shocked to see the buildings still bombed out. "I could only orientate myself by watching the sun go down. I couldn't recognize anything."

The sun went down — to the west, Lippert's goal. He walked to the Brandenberg Gate. There was no wall yet dividing the city, but barbed wire and armed guards had the same effect. Lippert could not get across to West Berlin.

"THERE I WAS completely Lost. So I decided to go ask somebody to help me."

The time was about 5 p.m. and Lippert began walking through the park, trying to judge people by their faces. He picked out an old man and "in my broken German I asked for help to get to West Berlin."

The man advised him to sit and wait until the next morning at 4 a.m. when the border would be opened again.

"This changed my opinion of Germany. From my childhood I had been brought up to hate the Germans and their 300 years of control over my people. It was amazing for me. I realized then there were only good and bad people."

He later met a woman who asked if he were trying to cross the border. Lippert said that in his naivete he told her the truth. She told him she too was waiting to cross and they spent the next lonely, frightening hours together.

The next morning, after hiding from patrols among crowds all night long, they separated with Lippert taking the elevated train to West Berlin. Once there he tried to get a policeman's attention by changing his clothes and swimming in a public fountain.

"I thought one had to do something wrong to get a policeman's attention," Lippert laughed.

When he went to the Canadian embassy, there were so many other refugees ahead of him that he was taken to the American Army Intelligence service. Six weeks with them, three with the British and three with the French, as the Allies tried to learn as much as possible from Lippert about conditions in Czechoslovakia.

AT ONE POINT, the French intelligence service asked Lippert to become a spy for them and carry secret codes back to his country. In return, they offered him immediate passage to the United States. Otherwise he faced a two-year waiting period.

Lippert said he refused when he learned that agents were being sent over with false codes. Arrangements were made by the French to have the Czechs capture these agents so they would be confused by the false codes.

Before coming to the United States, Lippert worked for the U.S. refugee program in West Berlin and Munich. He married again in 1958 to Edith, a German girl. In January 1956, he entered this country and settled in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Edith followed later.

The couple now have a five-year-old son, Erik. They moved to Arlington Heights in 1961 when Lippert was offered a job at Pre-Finished Metals in Elk Grove Village, his first job as a chemist since being black-listed by the Communists in 1950.

The Lipperts also have lived in Park Ridge and will shortly move to Schaumburg.

Back in 1968, Lippert helped his son, George, escape. He is now an electronic engineer in San Francisco. The other child from his first marriage, Donna, got as far as Munich where she met and fell in love with a German boy. Lippert's first wife had no desire to leave Czechoslovakia, he said.

No Low-Cost Homesites

A recent study of the Northwest suburbs shows no sites are available which can meet federal requirements for low-income housing, according to statements made at Thursday night's meeting of the Arlington Heights low and moderate-income housing study committee.

The high cost of land in the suburban area exceeds the limitations established by the federal government, according to Bernard Lee who made a surprise visit to the meeting. Lee is a commissioner of the Cook County Housing Authority (CCHA).

During the question-and-answer period, following a speech on the Rockford scattered-site housing project, Lee told committee members that "unless the federal government loosens its restrictions there just aren't any sites available."

Lee said any discussion of Arlington Heights forming a housing authority to build low-income units was merely "academic." The high land costs in the village more than exceed limitations of cost as established by the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Later in the meeting, the executive director of the CCHA said that he agreed with Lee's comments. Victor Walchirk said HUD uses a general rule of thumb on the cost of property. This general rule states that land purchased to build one unit of low-income housing will cost no more than $3,000.

AS ONE RESIDENT in the audience pointed out, the lowest priced lot in Arlington Heights is probably about $8,500.

In a high-cost area, low-income housing site proposals are generally for what is now publicly owned property, Walchirk said. By donations of the publicly owned property or selling below market cost, CCHA is able to build low-income housing projects for the elderly.

Walchirk reported to the committee that he thought a need for low-income housing built by a public housing authority was not needed in Arlington Heights except for senior citizens dwellings. However, the village does have a need for moderate-income housing, preferably built by private developers, he said.

When private developers build moderate-income housing projects the federal government subsidizes certain costs and the property remains on the public tax rolls.

Gas Station May Not Get OK To Open

Unless owners of the proposed Marathon Oil Co. gas station on the southeast corner of Smith Street and Northwest Highway agree to dedicate more land to the village, they may not be allowed to open for business.

The Palatine Village Board this week deferred action on granting a special use in a business district for the gas station. Rather than dedicate to the village a 17-foot wide strip of land on the west side of the property, owners of the property offered to sell the strip for $4,000.

However, Mayor John Moodie said the village never before has had to purchase land so that a project like this could be developed. Previously in similar situations, all property owners have dedicated land to the village.

"This is a business totally dependent on the road network," Moodie said. Because of this dependence, he said he would expect the property owners to donate the land to provide room for possible road improvements.

Her Power Is From The Lord

by KAREN RUGEN

A gilt-edged certificate on the wall calls her a medium. A notice below it claims she has the power of divine healing.

As if to guard the paper credentials and verify their credibility, a picture of Jesus Christ has been placed nearby. Across the room a statue of the Virgin Mary faces Molly Ranae as she does what she thinks God has intended her to do.

"I get all my powers from the Lord," says Mrs. Ranae who combines the religious with the supernatural. "I have the richest gift that can be found in the Bible."

Mrs. Ranae, who moved into her house at 1802 Locust Ln. in Mount Prospect a year ago, bills herself as a divine mystic and a possessor of extra-sensory perception, commonly called ESP. While she passes off her claim as a divine healer with "I just make people feel good," she has a lot more to say about her extra-sensory powers.

"I WAS THE seventh daughter of seven daughters," explains Mrs. Ranae who is quick to tell you her lucky number is seven. "When I was born into the family, I was born with a psychic veil over my face. From then on, people just kept asking me questions."

Although she says she has always been sure of her gift, Mrs. Ranae did not go into business until about 10 years ago "because friends urged me to go out and help people." For $5 a private reading, she's been doing it ever since.

"There are a lot of phonies and all they do is ask for money," said Mrs. Ranae who also uses her talents to entertain at small parties. "But I give customers their money's worth."

When the self-proclaimed mystic does readings for the housewives and businessmen who are her customers, she tries to open the chapters of their lives by holding their hands or several of their personal effects.

She says she gets her powers through vibrations and meditation, but can't describe what happens when she tries to see into the future or uncover hidden remnants of someone's past. All she can say is that she "gets her answers from God, sometimes I see pictures and sometimes I see dates."

SHE SAYS HER vibrations have dealt with national issues as well as personal incidents of her friends. Like many other mystics, she says she warned John Kennedy from going to Dallas and claims to have predicted the deaths of Martin Luther King and Dwight Eisenhower. She also claims she has helped solve murders and predicted the 1968 riots in Chicago.

Mrs. Ranae said sometimes her friends do not heed her warnings. She said she predicted that a griend's home in Glenview would be bombed; several days later it was. "It got to the point where I was even afraid to drive around with her in her car," she said.

One of Mrs. Ranae's most unusual readings took place when she was called into a nudist camp. "I went there, clutching a rosary," she said. "I prayed to God that he would not let me see anything below the face. He answered the prayer, and I did the readings."

Mrs. Ranae is as serious about her business as she is about her gift. In a strong voice, she emphasizes she is not a fortune teller and doesn't own a crystal ball. She says she is clairvoyant, although in the next breath she admits she cannot define what it is. She keeps repeating that her gift is from above and she uses it only the way God wants her to use it.

MOLLY RANAE

"God knows who to put the gift upon," she explained but didn't know why she felt he chose her. "All I know is that the Lord is always with me."

Deadline Donors Push Center Fund Over $10,000

The Herald's emergency fund to help save The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center has passed $10,000 — and additional donations are still coming in.

By Saturday, the fund had received a total $10,345 — $2,845 over the minimum goal of $7,500 required to keep the family service agency from curtailing service to Northwest suburbs.

The success of the appeal was met with rejoicing by staff members of the Center, headquartered at 1797 Oakton St., Des Plaines.

"The overwhelming response by the Northwest suburban area to the Herald's articles and editorials has been tremendous," said Mrs. Margaret Lisinski, district supervisor for The Salvation Army Center. "We are indeed deeply grateful for the community's interest and recognition for the need for the service and financial support.

"The emergency fund will enable us to keep the Center's present staff of social workers," she added, "and we will continue to be open five days and four nights a week."

THE CENTER IS the only professional family service agency available to suburbanites living in Des Plaines and Wheeling, Elk Grove, Palatine, and Schaumburg Townships.

To avoid a cutback in service to this area, the Center had to raise at last $7,500 by today. This goal represented one-half of the current $15,000 operating deficit. The balance is to be provided by a "matching grant" from a private foundation to be announced later this month by The Salvation Army in Chicago.

Center officials expressed hope that the "matching grant" will be increased to meet whatever total is contributed to the Herald emergency fund.

"To accommodate the large number of late donors, we are extending the fund drive deadline," said Charles E. Hayes, Herald editor in chief.

Donations may be sent to the Herald "Center Fund," P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. A final list of contributors will be published in Thursday's Herald.

The funds will be presented to the Center on Monday, Aug. 16 at a "victory" luncheon sponsored by the Herald.

AMONG MAJOR contributions made to the fund during the last few days were $177.65 from the Community Service Corps of Wheeling and Buffalo Grove, $100 from Bantam Books Inc., Des Plaines, and $100 from Peep's Hot Dogs, Arlington Heights.

Since the Herald fund was announced June 21, more than 1,800 readers have responded to the appeal. Support also has come from 24 Protestant and Catholic churches, seven service clubs, and several business firms.

If the foundation grant "matches" the fund total, the Center will be able to expand its present level of service as well as meet its 1971 deficit.

"We hope to secure enough money to add another full-time caseworker," explained Mrs. Lisinski, who added this would increase their present caseload capacity by 25 per cent.

You Can Still Help!

Contributions may still be made to The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center emergency fund.

Donations may be sent to Herald "Center Fund," P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. The final list of donors will be published in Thursday's Herald.

Park District's Growth May Lead To Tax Rate Cut

Growth of the Rolling Meadows Park District and more construction in the district should mean a lower park district tax rate for homeowners, according to Park District Board Pres. William T. Billings.

The board Thursday passed the 1971-72 appropriations ordinance giving the board the authority to spend $541,210, an increase of $90,000 over last year's ordinance.

Billings said that although the complete tax levy ordinance won't be approved until next month, the amount will probably be about the same as the 1970 figure of $451,130.

And because the amount will be spread out among more homeowners this year than last, individual homeowners will feel less of a park district tax bite.

THE BOARD ALSO approved new ice skating hours for 1971-72 which will reduce the number of rental hours available, but the number of public open-skating hours will remain the same.

Billings said new park district skating programs will be replacing the rental hours dropped.

The appropriations ordinance estimates the park district will get 25 per cent more revenue from its programs, not including the sports complex, in 71-72. These programs should earn about $61,000, according to the ordinance. This money will be used to partially offset the costs of the programs, Billings said.

The sports complex is expected to earn $156,500 in 71-72, while it took in about $100,000 in 69-70, its first year in operation.

Operating costs of the complex are also expected to be reduced by about $58,000 over 1970. Expected profit from the complex for 71-72 is $75,000. Billings said this money will be used to build added facilities for the complex.

When the tax levy is approved it will be sent to the Cook County treasurer's office, which will set the actual tax rates for the individual homeowners according to the tax levy.

No Low-Cost Homesites

A recent study of the Northwest suburbs shows no sites are available which can meet federal requirements for low-income housing, according to statements made at Thursday night's meeting of the Arlington Heights low and moderate-income housing study committee.

The high cost of land in the suburban area exceeds the limitations established by the federal government, according to Bernard Lee who made a surprise visit to the meeting. Lee is a commissioner of the Cook County Housing Authority (CCHA).

During the question-and-answer period, following a speech on the Rockford scattered-site housing project, Lee told committee members that "unless the federal government loosens its restrictions there just aren't any sites available."

Lee said any discussion of Arlington Heights forming a housing authority to build low-income units was merely "academic." The high land costs in the village more than exceed limitations of cost as established by the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Need Homes For Chicago Children

There's more children from Chicago who want to spend some time in the Northwest suburbs than there are suburbanites willing to open their homes for a couple of weeks.

The 1971 Friendly Town program now in its second session of the summer still needs suburban families to host several inner-city children for a period of two weeks.

Before the first session which ran from July 11 to 25 about 30 children were called and told they couldn't come, according to Mrs. Betty Ginger, Rolling Meadows.

"We just didn't have any place they could go," she said.

"IT'S KIND OF hard to call a kid who's ready to leave tomorrow and tell him he'll have to wait or maybe not come at all," she added.

Mrs. Ginger and Mrs. Mary Ann Reiter of Arlington Heights are the organizers of the program which arranges for the inner-city children to visit with suburban host families.

Some of the 30 children who missed out on the first session of the Friendly Town program now are visiting in the area for the second session. But several children still need a place to stay.

For the first time since the program was started a third session has been scheduled running from Aug. 8 to 22.

"But we're willing to make exceptions, if those dates aren't acceptable to a family who's willing to take a child," Mrs. Ginger said.

"IF THE KIDS don't go at the convenience of the host they don't go at all, so we really don't have a choice," she added.

This year the majority of children involved in the program will come through the Faith Community Church on Chicago's west side. Host families are asked to go to the church on Sunday morning to pick up their guest.

Friendly Town children are given a medical exam before their visits. They also are covered by a $2,500 sickness and accident policy during their visits.

To be eligible, a family must provide their own personal liability insurance, included in most homeowner's policies, and be willing to furnish a personal reference.

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

United Steelworkers Union and steel industry negotiators have reached tentative agreement on a three-year wage contract. Union leaders immediately convened a meeting of local officials to seek approval necessary to avert a midnight strike.

The Senate is beginning its final week before Congress' long summer recess faced with critical measures to extend the draft and insure the nation's largest defense contractor against bankruptcy. Senators must decide whether to revive the draft which expired July 1 and whether to guarantee repayment of $250 million in bank loans to Lockheed Aircraft Corp. Floor leaders advised Senate members to be prepared for late night sessions, not only to deal with these crucial measures, but possibly to take action to end a nationwide rail strike and approve an overhaul of regulations controlling political campaign spending.

Leaders of 350,000 union steelworkers extended their strike deadline 24 hours until midnight last night suggesting a new contract might be near. Railroad negotiators also reported some progress in their efforts to end a 17-day walkout that has shut down 10 carriers and cost millions of dollars. The steel workers are seeking a pact providing a 30 per cent pay increase over three years — about the same wage package won earlier this year from the aluminum, can and copper industries.

Indoor Swim Pool Needed

When annual floods strike Palatine and Rolling Meadows, few residents appreciate the sight of water.

But there's one area around here where most people probably would like to see water and which right now is as dry as a bone.

Aside from a few water fights near the drinking fountains in local schools, students in the area have had absolutely no access to water facilities during the school year. Specifically, they've had no access to swimming pools.

Only during the summer, when the park district pools and back yard pools are filled can youngsters swim, or more important, learn to swim. Although a few indoor pools are open in the surrounding areas at park districts and YMCAs, Palatine and Rolling Meadows have nothing for nine months of the year.

Not one of the high schools in Dist. 211 has an indoor pool for the students. Rolling Meadows High School is being built without a pool. Elementary School Dist. 15 has no pool facilities at any of its 19 schools.

High costs of pool construction have prevented school districts from providing pools in the past, although some cooperative efforts exist in other areas with park districts for use of indoor pools. All attempts in this area to work out similar efforts for pool facilities between parks and school has failed.

WITH MODULAR SCHEDULING beginning at Sanborn School in the fall, a more flexible method of breaking up the time in each school day will be created which will allow for a variety of new activities.

A hope of one of the teachers at Sanborn is to make swimming one of the school year activities.

Mark Swanson, a science teacher at Sanborn, is also a qualified instructor of swimming with the American Red Cross lifesaving and water safety program. It is his idea to structure some of the 20-minute "mods" in the modular scheduling to develop a swimming program for his students.

Obviously, his main problem is finding a pool. His only possibilities lie with Harper Junior College and with local apartment complexes that house pools.

In researching the proposition of getting a swimming program started, Swanson found out that any private organization which donates the use of a pool to the school district would receive tax deductions and benefits. There would also be no liability incurred by the owner of the pool because the swimming would be a regular part of the school day.

THERE ARE A NUMBER of complications that would arise through such a swimming program, such as transportation and additional expenses to the school district. However, participation of interested parents through PTA could take care of some of the obstacles.

Swanson is still open to suggestions about his swimming proposal and would welcome cooperation of area pool owners. However, swimming is just one of many additional activities the modular scheduling makes available to students and teachers.

Giving students options for classroom activities and permitting them to make their own choices contribute to the individual development of the child. Giving them the chance to participate in year-round swimming will also contribute to the physical well being of every child in the program.

Czech Makes His Own 'Great Escape'

by TOM VON MALDER

It sounded like any one of a hundred movie escapes from behind the Iron Curtain, complete with the escapee hanging from the undercarriage of a streaking train.

But it wasn't. It was real and it happened to George Lippert 18 years ago.

"I don't know about it being like the movies," Lippert said in a recent interview, while recalling his adventure. "I only know I wouldn't want to do it a second time. I don't know if I could."

Lippert, who lives at 1301 Cottonwood Ln. in Mount Prospect, was born in Prauge, Czechoslovakia in 1921. He vividly remembers the 1938 Munich agreement by which France and Great Britain gave his Czechoslovakia to Hitler and the Nazis.

"I got married in 1944," Lippert said. "It was after the war, in 1945, that I became an active member of the anti-Communist party, called the Beles Party after our president."

BUT IT WASN'T until 1949 that Lippert got into serious trouble with the Communist regime.

"I openly voted against the Communists in 1949 and was placed on their blacklist," Lippert said. The next year, Lippert was kicked out of his job as a chemist because "I didn't have a positive approach to the Communist regime."

The soft-spoken former refugee took a puff on his cigarette. "There was nothing I could do. They suggested I go to work in the coal mines."

But, with the help of a friend, he managed to avoid the mine pits and get a job as a buyer in the steel industry.

The period of respite for Lippert was short however. In the spring of 1953, he received a secret message from a member of the Communist-controlled labor union. "The message said that my days over there are counted."

THIS MESSAGE forced a decision and the decision was to escape. "I knew it was impossible for my whole family to escape as at that time Czechoslovakia was blocked from all sides. But by listening to Radio Free Europe I got the impression that in two to three years the Communist regime would be over. Then I could come back."

GEORGE LIPPERT recalls his 1953 escape from Communist Czechoslovakia. "When I first came to the United States, I found it hard to adjust. I wanted to go back immediately. Fortunately, I didn't have the money."

Yet, once the decision to escape had been made, it could never be certain that he would return or even make it out of the country. So, Lippert and his wife got a divorce, with her taking care of their two children.

Since it was impossible to get to West Germany directly at that time, the plan was to go over the border to East Germany. This was in July.

"At the border I could see the soldier and hear the dogs about 200 yards away. I laid down on the ground. I had brought some black pepper which I spread around my resting place."

The pepper was to throw the dogs off his scent. "The pepper saved my life," Lippert said. He was then free to move across the border into East Berlin.

"They came from one side only so I was able to climb under the car until the next station," Lippert said. The next station was some 50 miles and 30 minutes away.

Once back in the train, Lippert had only a short ride before another patrol boarded the train. This time it was the East Germans.

"These were regular patrols. But when the Germans came on I had no choice but to face them. They came from both sides and I was in the middle with nowhere to go.

"I still recall they asked for the identification card of the man next to me and the woman across from me. I had already given up. It was just plain luck."

The guards left without asking to see a card from Lippert, who had none.

The train reached East Berlin without further incident. There Lippert was shocked to see the buildings still bombed out. "I could only orientate myself by watching the sun go down. I couldn't recognize anything."

The sun went down — to the west, Lippert's goal. He walked to the Brandenberg Gate. There was no wall yet dividing the city, but barbed wire and armed guards had the same effect. Lippert could not get across to West Berlin.

"THERE I WAS completely Lost. So I decided to go ask somebody to help me."

The time was about 5 p.m. and Lippert began walking through the park, trying to judge people by their faces. He picked out an old man and "in my broken German I asked for help to get to West Berlin."

The man advised him to sit and wait until the next morning at 4 a.m. when the border would be opened again.

"This changed my opinion of Germany. From my childhood I had been brought up to hate the Germans and their 300 years of control over my people. It was amazing for me. I realized then there were only good and bad people."

He later met a woman who asked if he were trying to cross the border. Lippert said that in his naivete he told her the truth. She told him she too was waiting to cross and they spent the next lonely, frightening hours together.

The next morning, after hiding from patrols among crowds all night long, they separated with Lippert taking the elevated train to West Berlin. Once there he tried to get a policeman's attention by changing his clothes and swimming in a public fountain.

"I thought one had to do something wrong to get a policeman's attention," Lippert laughed.

When he went to the Canadian embassy, there were so many other refugees ahead of him that he was taken to the American Army Intelligence service. Six weeks with them, three with the British and three with the French, as the Allies tried to learn as much as possible from Lippert about conditions in Czechoslovakia.

AT ONE POINT, the French intelligence service asked Lippert to become a spy for them and carry secret codes back to his country. In return, they offered him immediate passage to the United States. Otherwise he faced a two-year waiting period.

Lippert said he refused when he learned that agents were being sent over with false codes Arrangements were made by the French to have the Czechs capture these agents so they would be confused by the false codes.

Before coming to the United States, Lippert worked for the U.S. refugee program in West Berlin and Munich. He married again in 1958 to Edith, a German girl. In January 1956, he entered this country and settled in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Edith followed later.

The couple now have a five-year-old son, Erik. They moved to Arlington Heights in 1961 when Lippert was offered a job at Pre-Finished Metals in Elk Grove Village, his first job as a chemist since being black-listed by the Communists in 1950.

The Lipperts also have lived in Park Ridge and will shortly move to Schaumburg.

Back in 1968, Lippert helped his son, George, escape. He is now an electronic engineer in San Francisco. The other child from his first marriage, Donna, got as far as Munich where she met and fell in love with a German boy. Lippert's first wife had no desire to leave Czechoslovakia, he said.

Gas Station May Not Get OK To Open

Unless owners of the proposed Marathon Oil Co. gas station on the southeast corner of Smith Street and Northwest Highway agree to dedicate more land to the village, they may not be allowed to open for business.

The Palatine Village Board this week deferred action on granting a special use in a business district for the gas station. Rather than dedicate to the village a 17-foot wide strip of land on the west side of the property, owners of the property offered to sell the strip for $4,000.

However, Mayor John Moodie said the village never before has had to purchase land so that a project like this could be developed. Previously in similar situations, all property owners have dedicated land to the village.

"This is a business totally dependent on the road network," Moodie said. Because of this dependence, he said he would expect the property owners to donate the land to provide room for possible road improvements.

Her Power Is From The Lord

by KAREN RUGEN

A gilt-edged certificate on the wall calls her a medium. A notice below it claims she has the power of divine healing

As if to guard the paper credentials and verify their credibility, a picture of Jesus Christ has been placed nearby. Across the room a statue of the Virgin Mary faces Molly Ranae as she does what she thinks God has intended her to do

"I get all my powers from the Lord," says Mrs. Ranae who combines the religious with the supernatural. "I have the richest gift that can be found in the Bible "

Mrs Ranae, who moved into her house at 1802 Locust Ln. in Mount Prospect a year ago, bills herself as a divine mystic and a possessor of extra-sensory perception, commonly called ESP. While she passes off her claim as a divine healer with "I just make people feel good," she has a lot more to say about her extra-sensory powers.

"I WAS THE seventh daughter of seven daughters," explaines Mrs. Ranae who is quick to tell you her lucky number is seven. "When I was born into the family, I was born with a psychic veil over my face. From then on, people just kept asking me questions."

Although she says she has always been sure of her gift, Mrs. Ranae did not go into business until about 10 years ago "because friends urged me to go out and help people." For $5 a private reading, she's been doing it ever since.

"There are a lot of phonies and all they do is ask for money," said Mrs. Ranae who also uses her talents to entertain at small parties. "But I give customers their money's worth."

When the self-proclaimed mystic does readings for the housewives and businessmen who are her customers, she tries to open the chapters of their lives by holding their hands or several of their personal effects.

She says she gets her powers through vibrations and meditation, but can't describe what happens when she tries to see into the future or uncover hidden remnants of someone's past. All she can say is that she "gets her answers from God, sometimes I see pictures and sometimes I see dates."

SHE SAYS HER vibrations have dealt with national issues as well as personal incidents of her friends. Like many other mystics, she says she warned John Kennedy from going to Dallas and claims to have predicted the deaths of Martin Luther King and Dwight Eisenhower. She also claims she has helped solve murders and predicted the 1968 riots in Chicago

Mrs. Ranae said sometimes her friends do not heed her warnings. She said she predicted that a griend's home in Glenview would be bombed; several days later it was. "It got to the point where I was even afraid to drive around with her in her car," she said.

One of Mrs. Ranae's most unusual readings took place when she was called into a nudist camp. "I went there, clutching a rosary," she said. "I prayed to God that he would not let me see anything below the face. He answered the prayer, and I did the readings."

Mrs. Ranae is as serious about her business as she is about her gift. In a strong voice, she emphasizes she is not a fortune teller and doesn't own a crystal ball. She says she is clairvoyant, although in the next breath she admits she cannot define what it is. She keeps repeating that her gift is from above and she uses it only the way God wants her to use it.

MOLLY RANAE

"God knows who to put the gift upon," she explained but didn't know why she felt he chose her. "All I know is that the Lord is always with me."

Deadline Donors Push Center Fund Over $10,000

The Herald's emergency fund to help save The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center has passed $10,000 — and additional donations are still coming in.

By Saturday, the fund had received a total $10,345 — $2,845 over the minimum goal of $7,500 required to keep the family service agency from curtailing service to Northwest suburbs.

The success of the appeal was met with rejoicing by staff members of the Center, headquartered at 1797 Oakton St., Des Plaines.

"The overwhelming response by the Northwest suburban area to the Herald's articles and editorials has been tremendous," said Mrs. Margaret Lisinski, district supervisor for The Salvation Army Center. "We are indeed deeply grateful for the community's interest and recognition for the need for the service and financial support.

"The emergency fund will enable us to keep the Center's present staff of social workers," she added, "and we will continue to be open five days and four nights a week."

THE CENTER is the only professional family service agency available to suburbanites living in Des Plaines and Wheeling, Elk Grove, Palatine, and Schaumburg Townships.

To avoid a cutback in service to this area, the Center had to raise at last $7,500 by today. This goal represented one-half of the current $15,000 operating deficit. The balance is to be provided by a "matching grant" from a private foundation to be announced later this month by The Salvation Army in Chicago.

Center officials expressed hope that the "matching grant" will be increased to meet whatever total is contributed to the Herald emergency fund.

"To accommodate the large number of late donors, we are extending the fund drive deadline," said Charles E. Hayes, Herald editor in chief.

Donations may be sent to the Herald "Center Fund," P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. A final list of contributors will be published in Thursday's Herald.

The funds will be presented to the Center on Monday, Aug. 16 at a "victory" luncheon sponsored by the Herald.

AMONG MAJOR contributions made to the fund during the last few days were $177.65 from the Community Service Corps of Wheeling and Buffalo Grove, $100 from Bantam Books Inc., Des Plaines, and $100 from Peep's Hot Dogs, Arlington Heights.

Since the Herald fund was announced June 21, more than 1,800 readers have responded to the appeal. Support also has come from 24 Protestant and Catholic churches, seven service clubs, and several business firms.

If the foundation grant "matches" the fund total, the Center will be able to expand its present level of service as well as meet its 1971 deficit.

"We hope to secure enough money to add another full-time caseworker," explained Mrs. Lisinski, who added this would increase their present caseload capacity by 25 per cent.

You Can Still Help!

Contributions may still be made to The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center emergency fund.

Donations may be sent to Herald "Center Fund," P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. The final list of donors will be published in Thursday's Herald.

Leak Will Delay Sewer Service

The start of sanitary sewer service to about 300 Prospect Heights homes has been delayed another two to three weeks this time because of a trunk line sewer leak.

The 300 houses are part of Phase One of the new Prospect Heights Old Town Sanitary District (OTSD) system. Most of the homes affected by the delay are located west of Elmhurst Road, east of Dale Avenue, north of Camp McDonald Road and south of Willow Road.

The entire OTSD system will cost $1.1 million and serve approximately 1,300 homes in Prospect Heights. Construction of the new system is divided into two phases. Phase One encompasses approximately 750 homes south of Willow Road. Phase Two includes 450 homes north of Willow Road.

The remaining 450 homes in Phase One can now be serviced. All of the homes in Phase One were originally expected to be serviced several months ago. However, a delay in construction of a Metropolitan Sanitary District (MSD) interceptor sewer put the OTSD lines behind schedule, according to Richard Schuld, superintendent of the Prospect Heights district. The interceptor, constructed along Wheeling and Camp McDonald roads, connects OTSD lines with MSD sewage treatment plants.

ONCE THE INTERCEPTOR was completed and OTSD contractors were able to finish construction of their lines in the same area a leak was discovered in the OTSD trunkline along Hillside Avenue. "We will have to dig up the area along Hillside Avenue to fix the pipe and then run another test before we can put the sewers into operation," said Schuld.

District residents must have sewer lines constructed from their home to the OTSD lines before they can use the new system. To hook up their home lines to the OTSD lines, residents myst pay tap-on fees of $250. If it is not paid within 90 days of the system's availability, the cost will rise to $450. An additional $50 will be added to the fee each year it is not paid.

Almost all of the residents in Phase One have paid their tap-on fees, according to Schuld. Many have completed construction of their home sewer lines.

Plan Cleanup Of McDonald Creek Soon

The McDonald Creek Improvement Committee plans to stage a one-day clean up of a portion of the creek sometime next month.

Charles Routson, committee chairman, announced that the committee plans to clean a three-block-long stretch of the creek just north of Camp McDonald Road. This portion of the creek is bordered on the west by residential homes along Patricia Lane. A developer owns the open land east of the creek.

The cleanup project will be held in the middle of August, said Routson. About a dozen Prospect Heights Jaycees have volunteered to join the project.

"WE'RE GOING to take out all of the big logs, tires, twigs and other debris that has floated downstream," said Routson. "This is not going to completely solve our flooding problem. But it will at least keep the culverts clean and the water flowing."

The three-block stretch of the creek is the only section in Prospect Heights that was not cleaned in another project held earlier this year. At that time a group of about 100 students from John Hersey High School, collecting debris along the creek. The students worked from the Country Gardens area on the north and from the Soo Line R.R. culvert on the south.

The committee is now waiting for Gov. Richard Ogilvie to sign a $115,000 appropriations bill for creek improvements. Most of the state money has already been earmaarked for rebuilding a railroad bridge over the creek near Euclid Avenue and Wolf Road. This is the first step in plans for full-scale, permanent improvement of the creek.

Good Times For Handicapped Eyed

The Mount Prospect Park District may have a program this fall where physically and mentally handicapped children could "just have a good time," according to Lois Lindberg, recreation supervisor.

Miss Lindberg is currently trying to get parents of the handicapped interested in the six-week program that would begin in October. The class would be held on Saturdays from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. on Saturday mornings in the gym and multi-purpose room at Lions Recreation Center, 411 S. Maple St.

Miss Lindberg said yesterday that the class activities would be tailored to the individual child's ability. She said activities would vary from circle games for the severely handicapped to tumbling and table tennis for the more advanced. Other activities would include rope jumping, volleyball, horse shoes, floor tennis and badminton.

"THE CLASS is not therapy, but therapeutic," said Miss Lindberg. "They go to their doctors for muscle development. Here they could have a good time and be with other children."

Miss Lindberg and Dale Johnson, recreation supervisor would conduct the program. Miss Lindberg said the class could be programmed on an individualized basis if the park district can find enough residents with training who would volunteer their time. She said anyone interested should contact the park district office at the recreation center or call 255-5380.

The class would be open to handicapped children of all ages living in the park district that covers a major portion of Mount Prospect, the Eighth Ward in Des Plaines and part of Elk Grove Village and Arlington Heights. No fee would be charged for the program, but participants would need a medical release from their doctor. Parents who would like to have their children participate in the program should contact Miss Lindberg at the park district office.

The park district is currently conducting a swim class for handicapped children. Miss Lindberg said the new program would give the handicapped "a chance for more recreation."

New 'Derby Miss'

Miss Karen Jurasek, a 21-year-old student from Aurora College, was named Miss American Derby 1971 at Arlington Park Race Track.

Miss Jurasek, a resident of Aurora, was one of 19 entrants in the annual beauty pageant which precedes Saturday's "Race of the Year," the $125,000 added American Derby.

First runner up in the contest was Donna DeLord, 18, 200 N. Pine, Prospect Heights. Second runner up was Kris Clark, 19, 454 Banbury, Arlington Heights.

The Senate is beginning its final week before Congress' long summer recess faced with critical measures to extend the draft and insure the nation's largest defense contractor against bankruptcy. Senators must decide whether to revive the draft which expired July 1 and whether to guarantee repayment of $250 million in bank loans to Lockheed Aircraft Corp. Floor leaders advised Senate members to be prepared for late night sessions, not only to deal with these crucial measures, but possibly to take action to end a nationwide rail strike and approve an overhaul of regulations controlling political campaign spending.

Leaders of 350,000 union steelworkers extended their strike deadline 24 hours until midnight last night suggesting a new contract might be near. The steel workers are seeking a pact providing a 30 per cent pay increase over three years — about the same wage package won earlier this year from the aluminum, can and copper industries.

Coronets Take State Title Again

For the eighth consecutive year, the Coronets senior girls drill team Saturday successfully defended their state championship title.

Composed of high school aged girls from High School Dist. 214, the 84-member drill team placed first in the State American Legion Championship held at Elk Grove High School.

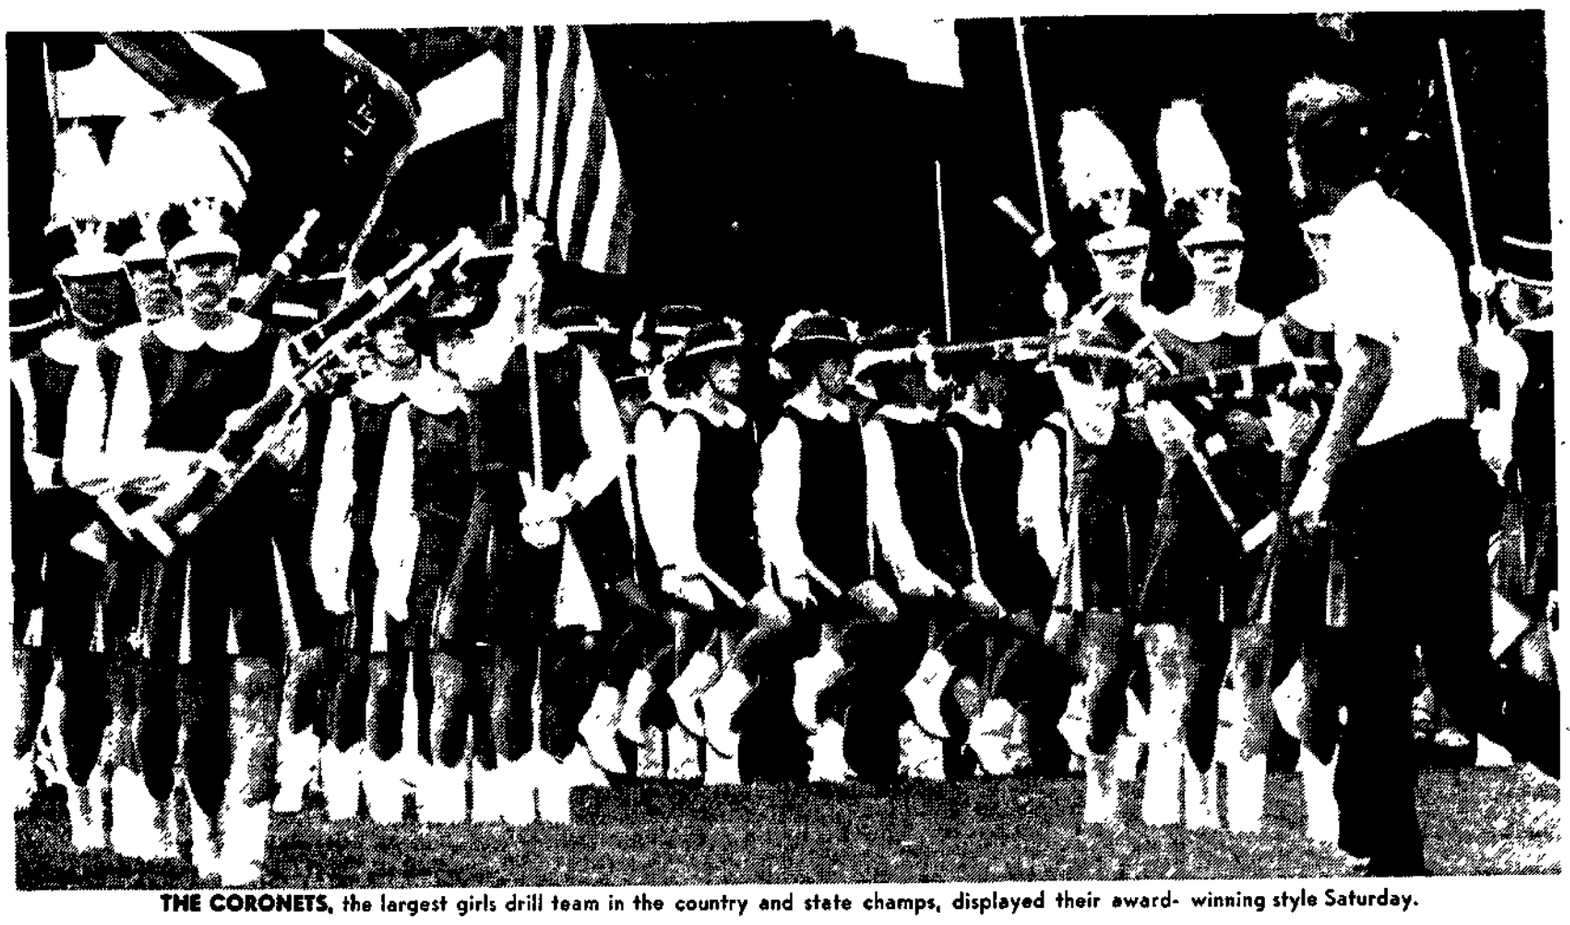
Competing against nine other senior drill teams from across Illinois, the Coronets scored 87.9 out of 100 possible points. The closest runner up was the R-Lettes, defending national champions from Round Lake, with a score of 78.2.

The Coronets are directed by Mr. and Mrs George Lindstrom of Kenosha, Wis. and assisted by the squad's three captains, Nancee Daily, Sue Pace and Sharon Shields.

Co-sponsored by the Arlington Heights Elks Club, V.F.W. Post 981 and the American Legion Merle Guild Post, the Coronets will travel to Dallas, Texas, Aug. 16 to compete for the National Championship, which they won twice before, and most recently, two years ago in Miami, Fla.

In other events at this weekend's competition, the Cavaliers, a Chicago-based group which has won over 426 first place awards including five national championships since being organized in 1948, captured the senior division drum and bugle corps competition.

The Guardsmen, a drum and bugle corps from Mount Prospect, placed fifth.



THE CORONETS, the largest girls drill team in the country and state champs, displayed their award- winning style Saturday.

No Low-Cost Homesites

A recent study of the Northwest suburbs shows no sites are available which can meet federal requirements for low-income housing, according to statements made at Thursday night's meeting of the Arlington Heights low and moderate-income housing study committee.

The high cost of land in the suburban area exceeds the limitations established by the federal government, according to Bernard Lee who made a surprise visit to the meeting. Lee is a commissioner of the Cook County Housing Authority (CCHA).

During the question-and-answer period, following a speech on the Rockford scattered-site housing project, Lee told committee members that "unless the federal government loosens its restrictions there just aren't any sites available."

Lee said any discussion of Arlington Heights forming a housing authority to build low-income units was merely "academic." The high land costs in the village more than exceed limitations of cost as established by the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Later in the meeting, the executive director of the CCHA said that he agreed with Lee's comments. Victor Walchirk said HUD uses a general rule of thumb on the cost of property. This general rule states that land purchased to build one unit of low-income housing will cost no more than $3,000.

AS ONE RESIDENT in the audience pointed out, the lowest priced lot in Arlington Heights is probably about $8,500.

In a high-cost area, low-income housing site proposals are generally for what is now publicly owned property, Walchirk said. By donations of the publicly owned property or selling below market cost, CCHA is able to build low-income housing projects for the elderly.

Walchirk reported to the committee that he thought a need for low-income housing built by a public housing authority was not needed in Arlington Heights except for senior citizens dwellings. However, the village does have a need for moderate-income housing, preferably built by private developers, he said.

When private developers build moderate-income housing projects the federal government subsidizes certain costs and the property remains on the public tax rolls.

Need Homes For Chicago Children

There's more children from Chicago who want to spend some time in the Northwest suburbs than there are suburbanites willing to open their homes for a couple of weeks.

The 1971 Friendly Town program now in its second session of the summer still needs suburban families to host several inner-city children for a period of two weeks

Before the first session which ran from July 11 to 25 about 30 children were called and told they couldn't come, according to Mrs. Betty Ginger, Rolling Meadows

"We just didn't have any place they could go," she said.

"IT'S KIND OF hard to call a kid who's ready to leave tomorrow and tell him he'll have to wait or maybe not come at all," she added.

Mrs Ginger and Mrs. Mary Ann Reiter of Arlington Heights are the organizers of the program which arranges for the inner-city children to visit with suburban host families

Some of the 30 children who missed out on the first session of the Friendly Town program now are visiting in the area for the second session But several children still need a place to stay.

For the first time since the program was started a third session has been scheduled running from Aug. 8 to 22.

"But we're willing to make exceptions, if those dates aren't acceptable to a family who's willing to take a child," Mrs. Ginger said.

"IF THE KIDS don't go at the convenience of the host they don't go at all, so we really don't have a choice," she added

This year the majority of children involved in the program will come through the Faith Community Church on Chicago's west side. Host families are asked to go to the church on Sunday morning to pick up their guest.

Friendly Town children are given a medical exam before their visits. They also are covered by a $2,500 sickness and accident policy during their visits.

To be eligible, a family must provide their own personal liability insurance, included in most homeowner's policies, and be willing to furnish a personal reference.

FAMILIES WITH no children at home and those who have only infants are asked to request two children. Past experience indicates that Friendly Town children who are used to large families, and crowded neighborhoods are happier when they are near children their own ages to play with.

Host families will receive the name of their assigned children about two days before the session begins. They are asked to contact the child and his family immediately to introduce themselves and ease any of the child's fear.

Barbecue Safety Film Available

The Mount Prospect Fire Department has a film guide to barbecue safety which is available to any group on request.

The film, entitled "It's Time To Light the Fire," gives examples of the dangers involved in cooking over an open fire. It explains the various fluids and their degree of flammability.

Other tips are not to start pouring a fluid on hot coals because flames may shoot up. It is better, according to the film, to use a solid type of starter, such as an electric lighter.

The short film is available with the fire department also supplying a speaker.

Chief Larry Pairitz also had other words of caution concerning summer activities. He said that power tools, such as lawn motors, should never be filled with fuel while hot. It is best, he said, to fill the machine before operating.

Gas containers should be stored from children and in proper containers with rigid metal construction, he said.

Deadline Donors Push Center Fund Over $10,000

The Herald's emergency fund to help save The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center has passed $10,000 — and additional donations are still coming in.

By Saturday, the fund had received a total $10,245 — $2,845 over the minimum goal of $7,500 required to keep the family service agency from curtailing service to Northwest suburbs.

The success of the appeal was met with rejoicing by staff members of the Center, headquartered at 1797 Oakton St., Des Plaines.

"The overwhelming response by the Northwest suburban area to the Herald's articles and editorials has been tremendous," said Mrs. Margaret Lisinski, district supervisor for The Salvation Army Center. "We are indeed deeply grateful for the community's interest and recognition for the need for the service and financial support.

"The emergency fund will enable us to keep the Center's present staff of social workers," she added, "and we will continue to be open five days and four nights a week."

THE CENTER IS the only professional family service agency available to suburbanites living in Des Plaines and Wheeling, Elk Grove, Palatine, and Schaumburg Townships.

To avoid a cutback in service to this area, the Center had to raise at last $7,500 by today. This goal represented one-half of the current $15,000 operating deficit. The balance is to be provided by a "matching grant" from a private foundation to be announced later this month by The Salvation Army in Chicago.

Center officials expressed hope that the "matching grant" will be increased to meet whatever total is contributed to the Herald emergency fund.

"To accommodate the large number of late donors, we are extending the fund drive deadline," said Charles E. Hayes, Herald editor in chief.

Donations may be sent to the Herald "Center Fund," P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. A final list of contributors will be published in Thursday's Herald.

The funds will be presented to the Center on Monday, Aug. 16 at a "victory" luncheon sponsored by the Herald.

AMONG MAJOR contributions made to the fund during the last few days were $177.65 from the Community Service Corps of Wheeling and Buffalo Grove, $100 from Bantam Books Inc., Des Plaines, and $100 from Peep's Hot Dogs, Arlington Heights.

Since the Herald fund was announced June 21, more than 1,800 readers have responded to the appeal. Support also has come from 24 Protestant and Catholic churches, seven service clubs, and several business firms.

If the foundation grant "matches" the fund total, the Center will be able to expand its present level of service as well as meet its 1971 deficit.

"We hope to secure enough money to add another full-time caseworker," explained Mrs. Lisinski, who added this would increase their present caseload capacity by 25 per cent.

You Can Still Help!

Contributions may still be made to The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center emergency fund.

Donations may be sent to Herald "Center Fund," P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. The final list of donors will be published in Thursday's Herald.

Teachers Agree To Resume Talks On New Contract

Teacher negotiations in Mount Prospect Dist 57 have agreed to resume contract talks with the school board bargaining team and professional negotiator Richard Zwieback.

After meeting Friday with Supt. Eric Sahlberg, teacher negotiator David Metzler said the two teams would meet as soon as possible. He named Aug. 9 or 12 as possible dates for the next meeting.

Resuming of negotiations for the 1971-72 teacher contract will end a temporary standstill that was reached last month after both sides could not agree on a meeting date. Teacher negotiators, representing the Mount Prospect Education Association (MPEA), said recently they would not meet with the current board until it raises its current salary offer.

Metzler said Friday that another board contract proposal and a response by the board to the teacher's latest proposal is included in a tentative agenda for the next meeting. The board's current salary proposal offers the 1970-71 salary schedule with an average of 3½ per cent increase for about 80 per cent of returning teachers. The teacher salary proposal is based on a yearly cost-of-living increase of 6 per cent, according to Metzler.

The negotiations of each contract item in the two proposals and the establishment of a series of meeting dates are also included in the tentative agenda which has not yet been approved by Zwieback. Both sides must agree to the agenda before it is final.

Metzler said teachers agreed to meet again because "we are willing to look at another proposal." He termed the meeting with Sahlberg as "excellent" and said: "I am on his side 100 per cent — he has taken an active interest in resuming negotiations and would like a settlement definitely before Labor Day."

Sahlberg said he called the meeting "to find a mutually acceptable meeting date as soon as possible."

Leo Floros, chairman of the board negotiating team, said he was "delighted" that teachers have agreed to meet. "We are interested in meeting and resolving this thing. I'll be there," he said. "But we don't want anybody to get the idea that the board is going to make any huge change in its positions. We're pretty close to it right now."

Floros said last week he hoped the board would show "some movement" in its next salary proposal. He indicated he would like to come up with a change in the proposal which would affect about 20 per cent of the teachers who would not receive a raise under the board's current proposal. Those teachers are currently on a step on the current salary schedule where increasing their education is the only way they could receive a pay hike.

Robert Klovstad Resigns Position

Robert Klovstad, chairman of the village's drainage and clean streams commission for more than two years, has resigned. His resignation was effectice yesterday

Klovstad said he was leaving the volunteer post for personal reasons and what he termed "an increased workload" in his job as a lawyer.

The commission has been actively involved in the Weller Creek improvement plan and has been working with the Illinois Division of Waterways making preparations for widening and deepening the creek's channel through Mount Prospect. The project is being undertaken to alleviate creek flood problems.

Klovstad, who has served on the commission four years said that, though his resignation became effective yesterday, he will continue to work with the commission, probably for another month. And, though, "nothing is planned now," he said he would not rule out future involvement in village government activities

William Reinert will fill the vacancy on the commission created with Klovstad's resignation, though he will not necessarily become the chairman. Reinert was appointed to the commission at a special village board meeting last week by Mayor Robert Teichert.

JOHN HERSEY HIGH School band member Doug Haney watches the action during Friday's Baltimore Colts-College All Star football game at Soldier Field in Chicago. The Hersey band was at the game to perform during pregame ceremonies and at halftime. See story and related pictures Section 2, Page 6.

AMONG MAJOR contributions made to the fund during the last few days were $177.65 from the Community Service Corps of Wheeling and Buffalo Grove, $100 from Bantam Books Inc., Des Plaines, and $100 from Peep's Hot Dogs, Arlington Heights.

Since the Herald fund was announced June 21, more than 1,800 readers have responded to the appeal. Support also has come from 24 Protestant and Catholic churches, seven service clubs, and several business firms.

If the foundation grant "matches" the fund total, the Center will be able to expand its present level of service as well as meet its 1971 deficit.

"We hope to secure enough money to add another full-time caseworker," explained Mrs. Lisinski, who added this would increase their present caseload capacity by 25 per cent.

Low-Cost Home Funding Awaiting Planning Grant

Arlington Heights' application for funding of a low-income housing project for elderly citizens is awaiting an allocation of a planning grant, according to the executive director of the Cook County Housing Authority (CCHA).

Victor Walchirk told members of the low and moderate-income housing study committee Thursday that the village's application has been informally approved by the U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

However, HUD is presently holding back on formally approving any new applications at the present time so Arlington Heights will have to wait until funds are allocated, Walchirk said.

When the new allocations are announced by HUD, "We hope your application will be a part of the new allocation for this regional office," Walchirk said.

Arlington Heights originally submitted an application through CCHA for 250 units of senior citizens' housing in the spring of 1970. CCHA was authorized by

THE CORONETS, the largest girls drill team in the country and state champs, displayed their award- winning style Saturday.

Coronets Take State Title Again

For the eighth consecutive year, the Coronets senior girls drill team Saturday successfully defended their state championship title.

Composed of high school aged girls from High School Dist. 214, the 84-member drill team placed first in the State American Legion Championship held at Elk Grove High School.

Competing against nine other senior drill teams from across Illinois, the Coronets scored 87.9 out of 100 possible points. The closest runner up was the R-Lettes, defending national champions from Round Lake, with a score of 78.2.

The Coronets are directed by Mr. and Mrs. George Lindstrom of Kenosha, Wis. and assisted by the squad's three captains, Nancee Dally, Sue Pace and Sharon Shields.

Co-sponsored by the Arlington Heights Elks Club, V.F.W. Post 981 and the American Legion Merle Guild Post, the Coronets will travel to Dallas, Texas, Aug. 16 to compete for the National Championship, which they won twice before, and most recently, two years ago in Miami, Fla.

In other events at this weekend's competition, the Cavaliers, a Chicago-based group which has won over 426 first place awards including five national championships since being organized in 1948, captured the senior division drum and bugle corps competition.

The Guardsmen, a drum and bugle corps from Mount Prospect, placed fifth.

Review Theater Request

A proposal for a second movie theater in Arlington Heights will be reviewed by the village board tonight at 8 p.m. in the Municipal Building, 33 S. Arlington Heights Rd.

Arthur Rubloff and Company, developers of the K-Mart department store complex planned for the northeast corner of Golf and Algonquin roads, has requested a variation to their previously approved construction plans which did not include a theater.

James V. Celano, Jr., a development agent for Rubloff, tonight will formally present the request to the board.

Celano, however, has declined to give details of the proposal.

IN A LETTER he sent to the village administration last week, Celano said the theater will be about 7,000 square feet in size.

The proposed theater is part of a request for a variation to a planned unit development approved by the board last year. Celano's letter said under the revised plans a theater will be added and the total building area for other retail stores in the development will be reduced by about 3,100 square feet.

Celano said he will discuss the proposal in more detail tonight.

In other business, the board will vote on an ordinance which will allow the village to fill a vacancy left in the village clerk's position by Mrs. Betty Revard, who retired Saturday after two years of service.

VILLAGE MGR. L. A. Hanson said the ordinance is a legal technicality, but necessary to fill the unexpired term.

Trustees, are also expected to review an ordinance which will amend the village building code to include provisions

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

United Steelworkers Union and steel industry negotiators have reached tentative agreement on a three-year wage contract. Union leaders immediately convened a meeting of local officials to seek approval necessary to avert a midnight strike.

The Senate is beginning its final week before Congress' long summer recess faced with critical measures to extend the draft and insure the nation's largest defense contractor against bankruptcy. Senators must decide whether to revive the draft which expired July 1 and whether to guarantee repayment of $250 million in bank loans to Lockheed Aircraft Corp. Floor leaders advised Senate members to be prepared for late night sessions, not only to deal with these crucial measures, but possibly to take action to end a nationwide rail strike and approve an overhaul of regulations controlling political campaign spending.

Leaders of 350,000 union steelworkers extended their strike deadline 24 hours until midnight last night suggesting a new contract might be near. Railroad negotiators also reported some progress in their efforts to end a 17-day walkout that has shut down 10 carriers and cost millions of dollars. The steel workers are seeking a pact providing a 30 per cent pay increase over three years — about the same wage package won earlier this year from the aluminum, can and copper industries.

She Was Always A Fighter

PROFILE

A Look at People from the Passing Suburban Scene

by SANDRA J. BROWNING

When Alicia Smith was in grade school, her parents were told she'd be lucky to finish eighth grade.

The college graduate now holds an administrative post with the Arlington Heights Park District.

The recreation supervisor says she's always had a carrot on a stick dangling in front of her nose and "I've been a fighter since the day I was born.

Her fighting spirit proved the educators wrong when they told her parents she didn't have the ability to even graduate from high school.

When Miss Smith sees a challenge, she likes to meet it. "You have to strain those muscles once in awhile to know you have them," she said.

THE CHALLENGE of the local park district was one of the things which drew her to start working for the district earlier this year

Seeing the park development and meeting Thomas Thornton, director of parks and recreation, who has been with the district for many years, were two items which lured Miss Smith from her job with the Skokie Park District.

With the physical development of the district, Miss Smith said she also saw the potential growth. "That is one of the best challenges to a professional — future growth and possibilities," she said.

The 23-year-old supervisor is interested in developing after-school and evening programs for handicapped children and adults She has been talking with residents and community groups and said "there is definitely a void in the community" in this area and many people seem to be "sensitive" to that void.

A GRADUATE OF LaCrosse State University in Wisconsin, Miss Smith is also interested in "artsy" programs and thinks the park district needs to offer more programs in the areas of arts, music and drama.

As one of the three recreation supervisors in the district, Miss Smith is in charge of day camps, tiny tots, modern dance, mobile recreation units, instructional programs, community-wide special events, mini-Woodstocks planned for this summer, open-air concerts, art shows, baton and arts and crafts programs.

Among other duties, Miss Smith was in charge of designing and laying out the park district's brochure "Super Summer 71." She will be working for the design of the fall brochure, also, and will strive for something which will "excite" people about the park district and its activities.

The energetic supervisor said she wants to work on activities which will "draw Arlington Heights together. The park district is for the whole community, not just one neighborhood."

DESCRIBING herself as a "real nut" on ecology, Miss Smith said people have begun to realize the anti-pollution movement means "cleaning up not only their yards, but their minds and bodies as well."

A native of Wisconsin, Miss Smith said she can't believe the "suburban" image of the area. She said she is used to "wide open spaces and I can't get over not having to drive through fields to come to another town."

An advocate of a cultural center in Arlington Heights, Miss Smith said that such a center should be run by the park district. "We can handle it," she said, because the park district would have the professional staff available.

A future cultural center should be a part of the community and open to all forms of the arts "so it can be continually in use." The center would be better if it were run by the park district because "we could provide a wider variety of creative programming," she said.

A center would be a good "showcase" for the community, she feels, and would also be a focal point to draw the community together.

DESCRIBING recreation as a way to "refresh yourself," Miss Smith said recreation "has reached an all-time high in people's lives. People are realizing that recreation is diversion that we desperately need."

The stress on leisure time is reflected in advertising and all areas of people's lives, she said. "The park district has to be attuned to these things. There's more than just softball and volleyball."

Miss Smith said she sometimes has trouble with her first name — Alicia — because people mispronounce it. Named after her grandmother, Miss Smith said the name (pronounced as if it were spelled Alisha) is derived from a Greek name meaning truth.

SAYING THAT women liberationists were a "bit extreme," Miss Smith said she "enjoys being a woman" and plans to get married someday.

Talking about her future, Miss Smith said she wants to work in the promotional areas of publicizing park programs and helping give people "ideas of what to do with their leisure time."

The supervisor also joked about someday writing a book about the trials and tribulations of being a single girl. Her title for the book would be, "My Special Albatros."

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS firemen Friday morning extinguished a fire at Capital Fixture and Construction Corp., 600 W. University. The fire, however, was confined to a dust collector outside and behind the building. Fire Chief Harvey Carothers said he did not know how the fire started. Between $2,000 and $3,000 worth of damage was done to the dust collector apparatus, according to plant manager Ferdinand Furtner.

Reach Teacher Pact

Dist. 23 teachers' salaries for the 1971-72 school year have been settled by the negotiating teams of the school board and the teachers' association.

The new salary schedule will not be announced before the board's August 11 meeting, at which time board members are expected to approve the schedule. Members of the Prospect Heights Education Association are also expected to meet soon to ratify the salary settlement.

The negotiating teams have been meeting since March to determine salary increases Earlier, Supt Edward Grodsky predicted that the increases will probably be less this year than last year He said, "The increase in the cost of living is lower than last year And we are short of money We have lost several referendums proposing tax hikes "

Dist 23 teachers' salaries are based on a merit system rather than the salary index scale used in neighboring districts, on training and experience. Under the merit system, teachers are paid a cost-of-living increase and a merit increase.

The merit increases are based on five ratings: Unsatisfactory, below average, competent, above average, and superior. The last three ratings carry an increase in salary.

IN THEIR FIRST pproposal, the teachers asked that a superior teacher be given $850, an above-average teacher be given $650 and a competent teacher be given $350. However, the board originally proposed $260 for superior teachers, $130 for above average teachers and $85 for competent teachers.

The negotiators agreed before they reached a settlement to use last year's salary scale to determine the teachers' base pay. And they have agreed that the cost of living increase will be 5.5 per cent of the base pay.

Last year teachers rated as competent received a merit increase of $200, above-average teachers received $400, and superior teachers received $600.

Funds alloted for teachers' salaries in the 1971-72 budget ($925,596) reflect a decrease of $92,000 from last yerr. The total education fund, $1,401,731, is about $23,000 under last year's budget figure.

for horse stables within village limits.

Hanson said the ordinance will set down guidelines for concrete, fire-proof stables at Arlington Park Race Track, which was annexed to the village in 1969. The building code is a product of 1965.

Last June 3, a costly fire in the stable area of the track brought out village inspectors who determined that all of the 42 wooden stables did not conform with local building regulations, prompting the proposed ordinance.

THE ORDINANCE, would prohibit the wooden stables which track officials are now replacing with conforming, concrete structures.

John Loome, president of Chicago Thoroughbred Enterprises, owners of Arlington and Washington Park tracks, said previously that all wooden stables will be replaced in about four years.

Living quarters for stable hands will also be built separately from the barns, he said. Currently, living quarters are connected to each end of the barns.

Surveys Mailed Friday

Surveys asking the opinions of nearly 2,000 Arlington Heights residents were mailed Friday and expected to be delivered to local homes and apartments over the weekend or today.

Village officials have asked for residents' cooperation in filling out the forms and returning the questionnaires in the stamped, self-addressed envelopes included with the surveys.

Information compiled from the results will be used by the village planner, Joseph Kesler, and other local officials in preparing a new comprehensive plan for the future development of Arlington Heights.

The return rate on a random sampling of about 100 survey forms sent out in early July was about 50 per cent. Kesler said he is hoping for at least that same percentage on the mass mailing sent out last week.

THE MASS SURVEY will include a random sampling of single-family homes selected from the village's water billing list and multi-family homes selected from the vehicle sticker registration list.

A portion of the surveys also will be distributed to unincorporated areas. According to the state law, a village's comprehensive plan may include planning for areas within one and one half miles of the municipality's boundaries.

Questions on the survey include residents income level, size of home, area of town they live in and other statistical data. No names will be required when the questionnaires are returned.

Other items include length of residency in the village, size of family, number of rooms in the house or apartment and ages of family members.

Residents are also asked to rate certain services, including convenience in shopping, general shopping, professional services, police protection, fire protection, transportation to Chicago, flood control, elementary schools, library and recreational facilities.

ALSO, THE SURVEY will ask residents' opinions on the local traffic problems, parking facilities, transportation locally and to other communities, sanitation and garbage pickup and entertainment facilities.

Kesler said the survey was being used to not only find out statistical information but also to learn what concerns the residents of the village.

Members of the mester plan committee, which includes Arlington Heights Village Board members and plan commissioners, can use these problems in helping establish priorities in working on a new master plan.

Information from the surveys will also be used in the preparing of a report by the low and moderate-income housing study committee.

the Village Board to act as the village's agent in the matter.

FOLLOWING THE submission of the application, local officials conducted a survey of residents. Results, which were sent to HUD, showed that at least 250 people now living in the village were interested in and apparently eligible for housing for the elderly

Walchirk said he had been informally told by HUD officials that 100 to 150 units would be set aside for Arlington Heights, but he has not received any formal approval

During his speech, Walchirk said CCHA built the 127-unit 10-story building for senior citizens in Niles in 1968. The project is located across the street from the Golf Mill shopping center.

Housing projects for senior citizens are presently being built in Park Forest and Skokie by CCHA Both are 10-story buildings and include about 125 units.

Income requirements for living in the housing include one person having an income less than $4,500 and a couple having an income of not more than $5,000. Most of the units in these developments rent for about $35 to $40 per unit Residents of the project are 63 years old and older

IF ELDERLY housing were built in Arlington Heights, variations in the height of the building and the density of the project would probably be requested, as the CCHA has done in other towns where it has built this type of housing. In other matters, "we would obey local building codes as far as possible," Walchirk said

The CCHA executive said the granting of these variations would not establish a precendent for private developers to also request exemption from restrictions "because we are a public agency."

During a question and answer session, Walchirk said CCHA has a rental-lease program which uses existing housing. Under this program, the public housing authority leases an apartment from the landlord, rents at a lower cost to a low-income tenant The authority uses federal funds to pay the landlord the difference between the market rental of the apartment and the amount which the tenant pays.

Recreation Park Victor In Swimming Meet

The swimming team from Recreation Park scored a clear-cut victory last week in the multi-phase swimming meet which includes teams from all the outdoor swimming pools operated by the Arlington Heights Park District.

Although the meet had been delayed a week because of bad weather, the delay did not seem to dampen Recreation Park's team drive towards the summer championship.

DURING LAST week's meet, Recreation gathered a total of 639.5 points, more than doubling the second place team's total for the meet. Pioneer Park won second at this meet with a total of 305. Points are awarded to each team if its swimmers place in the top 10 spots of each event. Points are also awarded for each swimmer from a park who participates in an event.

Although the Recreation team, coached by Tom Rowe, collected only three firsts in the meet, the team's swimmers had as many as five people in each event and thus dominated the meet. Heritage Park's team had seven swimmers in the winner's circle but only managed to win fourth place in the over-all meet competition.

Sub-totals for last week's meet show Camelot Park in third place with 273, Heritage in fourth with 261 and Frontier in fifth with 159.5 points.

Double-winners during the meet included Jody Foster picking up two wins in the 11-and 12-year-old girls' division and Cheryl Takata in the 13-and 14-year-old girls bracket.

Steven Foster in the eight-year-old boys and younger swimmers' division, Mark Markwell in the 9 and 10-year-old boys' division and Mark Rusche in the 11-and 12-year-old boys' division also posted double victories.

THE FIVE double-winners in last week's contest all lead their own divisions for high individual point totals.

Single victories for girls went to Alice Livingston, Barb Volden, Lynn Rusche, Sue Dragoon, Barb Duel and Laura Prinslow. Blue ribbons in the various boys' age divisions were obtained by Gary Takata, Don Fanning, Jim Young and Bill McCaffrey.

Deadline Donors Push Center Fund Over $10,000

The Herald's emergency fund to help save The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center has passed $10,000 — and additional donations are still coming in.

By Saturday, the fund had received a total $10,345 — $2,845 over the minimum goal of $7,500 required to keep the family service agency from curtailing service to Northwest suburbs.

The success of the appeal was met with rejoicing by staff members of the Center, headquartered at 1797 Oakton St., Des Plaines.

"The overwhelming response by the Northwest suburban area to the Herald's articles and editorials has been tremendous," said Mrs. Margaret Lisinski, district supervisor for The Salvation Army Center. "We are indeed deeply grateful for the community's interest and recognition for the need for the service and financial support.

"The emergency fund will enable us to keep the Center's present staff of social workers," she added, "and we will continue to be open five days and four nights a week."

THE CENTER IS the only professional family service agency available to suburbanites living in Des Plaines and Wheeling, Elk Grove, Palatine, and Schaumburg Townships.

To avoid a cutback in service to this area, the Center had to raise at last $7,500 by today. This goal represented one-half of the current $15,000 operating deficit. The balance is to be provided by a "matching grant" from a private foundation to be announced later this month by The Salvation Army in Chicago.

Center officials expressed hope that the "matching grant" will be increased to meet whatever total is contributed to the Herald emergency fund.

"To accommodate the large number of late donors, we are extending the fund drive deadline," said Charles E. Hayes, Herald editor in chief.

Donations may be sent to the Herald "Center Fund," P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. A final list of contributors will be published in Thursday's Herald.

The funds will be presented to the Center on Monday, Aug. 16 at a "victory" luncheon sponsored by the Herald.

AMONG MAJOR contributions made to the fund during the last few days were $177.65 from the Community Service Corps of Wheeling and Buffalo Grove, $100 from Bantam Books Inc., Des Plaines, and $100 from Peep's Hot Dogs, Arlington Heights.

Since the Herald fund was announced June 21, more than 1,800 readers have responded to the appeal. Support also has come from 24 Protestant and Catholic churches, seven service clubs, and several business firms.

If the foundation grant "matches" the fund total, the Center will be able to expand its present level of service as well as meet its 1971 deficit.

"We hope to secure enough money to add another full-time caseworker," explained Mrs. Lisinski, who added this would increase their present caseload capacity by 25 per cent.

You Can Still Help!

Contributions may still be made to The Salvation Army Community Counseling Center emergency fund.

Donations may be sent to Herald "Center Fund," P. O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. The final list of donors will be published in Thursday's Herald.

Indians Abandon Big Bend; Forest Dist. Clean Campsite

Forest Preserve district crews worked Friday and over the weekend cleaning up the abandoned Indian campsite at Big Bend Lake in Des Plaines.

A group of about 50 Indians who had been residents of the camp for almost a month suddenly moved last Friday morning to an abandoned Nike Missile base site at the Argonne National Laboratory in southern DuPage County.

Mike Chosa, Indian leader who had complained of harassment from county officials and sheriff's police, could not be reached for comment Friday.

One member of a small group of Indians who remained Friday morning to gather belongings at the Big Bend campsite told a Herald reporter that harassment by sheriff's police had caused the Indians to leave.

IT WAS LEARNED Friday that the state's attorney's office has decided not to authorize any complaints at this time against several men who reportedly raped two women visitors at the Big Bend camp July 24.

Departure of the Indian group came less than 24 hours after a conference on Friday between Chosa, Chief Arthur Hintz, Capt. Dale Mensching, Det. Robert Zeinet of the Des Plaines Police Department and two assistant state's attorneys.

After the conference, during which the reported rapes were discussed, police and the state's attorneys refused to make any comment on the case.

The two women visitors, both in their 20s, reportedly were attacked about 10 p.m. July 24, one in a tent at the campsite and the other in the nearby woods. They had stayed all day at the camp after bringing supplies and household goods to the Indians.

It could not be learned whether police have been able to identify all the attackers, although they reportedly have the name of at least one of them.

THE WOMEN, both suburban residents, were driven back to their homes after the reported attacks by another visitor to the Indian campsite.

When they departed Friday, the band of Indians left the west shore of Big Bend Lake and the nearby woods in what was described as "disgraceful" condition by Don Peterson, Des Plaines area superintendent for the Cook County Forest Preserve District.

Peterson, who supervised crews at the abandoned campsite Friday, told a Herald reporter that the clean-up will take two or three days to complete.

The Indians, who had complained that forest preserve officials refused to pick up trash at the site while they were there, left two tents and an abandoned auto on the lake shore.

Just inside the woods, were two large piles of trash and household items, mostly clothing, that had been given to the tribe by well-wishers during their month-long stay in Des Plaines.

ONE OF THE PILES, made up solely of clothing, was about 30 feet in diameter and one to three feet deep. The lakeshore and woods were strewn with trash and discarded household items. Also left at the site were a number of outdoor cooking grills and a few pieces of lawn furniture.

The Indian group, which included about 50 full-time residents, moved to Big Bend July 2 after being forced to leave an abandoned Nike missile base at Chicago's Belmont Harbor. Chosa said the Indians occupied the base after a Chicago apartment building in which they were living burned down.

THE OFFICE OF the Maine Township "Hotline" reflects the concerns of its callers and its volunteers. "Help me if you can, I'm feelin' down, and I do appreciate your bein' 'round," are the words of a song tacked to a wall in the office. "That should be our theme song," said one of Hotline's 125 volunteers. From 2 p.m. to midnight daily the Hotline (825-0860) is open and volunteers are on hand to listen and to refer the problems of callers to the proper place for further help. Now in its 10th month of existence, Hotline has handled over 1,200 calls.

Kindergarten Readiness Is Changed

The Des Plaines Park District's "Kindergarten Readiness" program has undergone changes in scheduling, price and age limitations to encourage more parents to enroll their children.

In coordination with Des Plaines School Dist. 62, the program aims to provide a happy, friendly learning atmosphere in which each child can develop according to his own pattern.

"We are planning an environment in which the prekindergarten child will have an opportunity to share experiences which will develop school readiness and increase his abilities for effective participation in kindergarten activities, "a park spokesman said.

The program will be open to three and four-year-olds who have reached their birthdays prior to Dec. 1, 1971. It will be held from Sept. 13 through Dec. 17 at West Park, on the corner of Greenview Avenue and Wolf Road in Des Plaines.

Morning classes will be held for three-year-olds from 9 to 11 a.m. Mondays and Wednesdays and for four-year-olds from 9 to 11 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays. Afternoon classes for four-year-olds will be held from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays. The fee for each session is $45.

Registration for the program will be open at the Park District until Sept. 1. Classes will be limited to 25 children each. A $10 deposit will hold a spot for a child with the balance due on the opening date of class.

Park District Sets Family Get Together

An annual family get-together sponsored by the Des Plaines Park District, will take place Tuesday night at each playground or school where a summer program has been offered.

Programs and entertainment will be sponsored by the various parks. Those hosting activities will be sponsored by the different parks. Those hosting activities will be Central, Plainfield, Orchard, South, Cumberland, Bluett, West, and Terrace Parks.

Further information about programs and time schedules can be obtained from playground supervisors or leaders.

Hotline -- Someone You Can Talk To

by VICKI HAMENDE

The phone rings at 2:30 p.m.

The caller's friend is in jail and he needs money to bail him out.

A "Hotline" volunteer refers him to a legal counselor.

The phone rings again at 2:44 p.m. The caller is new in town. She is washing the dishes. Her husband is at work. She just wants to talk and to find a good place to shop.

Since last October, more than 125 Maine Township "Hotline" volunteers have answered 1,203 phone calls from persons wanting information about everything from abortions to drugs to draft laws or from people wanting to talk about their jobs, their families or their dating problems.

ORGANIZED BY the Des Plaines and Park Ridge Coordinating Councils on Youth Problems, "Hotline" is in operation from 2 p.m. to midnight daily.

According to the "Guide and Procedures" for Hotline volunteers and staff, "The Maine Township Hotline exists to provide free, confidential volunteer listening, helping and referral services to those persons, specifically young persons, who express problems.

"We are not primarily a treatment agency. Our help is mostly in terms of helping those who call to identify their own problems and providing them with sources, either within or without the community, which can be of assistance in solving these problems," the guide says.

The phone rings at 4 p.m The caller is a mother who has discovered that her teenage son is addicted to drugs. A Hotline volunteer refers her to a drug therapy organization.

According to Blair Plimpton, director of the Park Ridge Council on Youth Problems and one of the first backers of the Hotline, each volunteer is carefully screened before he is permitted to answer Hotline phone calls.

"In addition to filling out an application and going through an interview," Plimpton said, "a new volunteer must spend at least four hours observing and talking with the more experienced volunteers. Together they can set up expectations and discuss the kinds of things volunteers should be doing," he said.

This Morning In Brief

The Nation

United Steelworkers Union and steel industry negotiators have reached tentative agreement on a three-year wage contract. Union leaders immediately convened a meeting of local officials to seek approval necessary to avert a midnight strike.

The Senate is beginning its final week before Congress' long summer recess faced with critical measures to extend the draft and insure the nation's largest defense contractor against bankruptcy. Senators must decide whether to revive the draft which expired July 1 and whether to guarantee repayment of $250 million in bank loans to Lockheed Aircraft Corp. Floor leaders advised Senate members to be prepared for late night sessions, not only to deal with these crucial measures, but possibly to take action to end a nationwide rail strike and approve an overhaul of regulations controlling political campaign spending.

Leaders of 350,000 union steelworkers extended their strike deadline 24 hours until midnight last night suggesting a new contract might be near. Railroad negotiators also reported some progress in their efforts to end a 17-day walkout that has shut down 10 carriers and cost millions of dollars. The steel workers are seeking a pact providing a 30 per cent pay increase over three years — about the same wage package won earlier this year from the aluminum, can and copper industries.

The War

Communists fired a barrage of mortars at Tay Minh air base, the staging area northwest of Saigon for two South Vietnamese drives into Cambodia. Field reports said about 30 rounds were fired in 20 minutes. The base 50 miles northwest of Saigon is run by the South Vietnamese but a U.S. helicopter company, maintenance battalion and engineer battalion have headquarters there.

Close O'Hare At Night?

Closing O'Hare Airport at night, a recent recommendation from an anti-noise group to the Federal Environmental Protection Agency, has been backed for several years by Des Plaines officials.

The O'Hare Area Noise Abatement Council, which has representatives from 19 communities near the airport, recommended last week that O'Hare be closed from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. nightly.

Airplane noise is particularly disturbing to Des Plaines residents, because Des Plaines is caught between the two most active runway lanes at night, officials said. Chicago's plans for airport expansion mean it could get worse, they said.

The noise at night "shakes chandeliers and knocks dishes off shelves, and some residents say the noise is popping nails from the walls because of vibration," Ald. Robert Michales (8th) told the Herald. He said he receives complaints constantly from residents of his west side ward, which lies in the path of a northwest runway.

He said that the northeast runway is now closed at night, because Federal Aviation Administration officials wanted to cut down noise over hospitals in the Park Ridge area. He said this is unfair preferential treatment to that city, since other hospitals exist along the northwest lane through Des Plaines.

At Washington National Airport, in the capital, flights are stopped at night.

Ald. Alan Abrams (8th) said that current Chicago plans for airport expansion include construction of a new aircraft cargo building and a parallel northwest runway for cargo traffic.

Most night flights are cargo shipments, Ald. Abrams said. More cargo shipment capacity may mean that the number of night flights will increase until they equal the number of day flights — one every 40 seconds, Ald. Abrams said.

Neal Callahan, community relations officer for the FAA, said the federal government has no control over decisions by Chicago to increase cargo flights or flights at night.

In the past Callahan has pointed out that Washington National Airport is near other major airports which can receive the freight flights, while O'Hare is near no other major airport.

O'Hare could not continue to handle the same amount of cargo, if it did not have night flights, and a third Chicago area airport would be needed, both aldermen said.

Park Dist. Slates Summer Fun Circus

The Des Plaines Park District's Summer Circus of Fun will be held at Rand Park, Aug. 7. District activities will be presented starting at 1 p.m. Each of the summer playgrounds is sponsoring a carnival-type game booth for the two-and-one-half hour activity.

Afternoon attractions include a clown act, a puppet show, a cheerleading show, a demonstration by graduates of the dog obedience class, the munchkin act, a cakewalk, and the versatile Kevin Dole on the organ.

A selection of games costing one cent each will include the football throw, ring toss, weight guessing, golf putt, and musical chair game.

The arts and crafts exhibit, representative of the individual parks within the district, will display works of many of the participating children.

SIXTY-FOUR RETAIL shops will be constructed in the two-story shopping mall, proposed by redevelopment officials for downtown Des Plaines. More than 70 Des Plaines' businessmen last week were shown plans for the mall, which would be part of an $8 million project slated to begin next spring. The mall would also include a "mini-theater," the businessmen were told. Above is an artist's conception of the completed mall.

Company Readies For Redevelopment

The Des Plaines Tomorrow Corp., a not-for-profit company that has been buying up properties for downtown renewal pruposes, has purchased all but one parcel of land needed for the first phase of downtown redevelopment.

According to James Paroubek, president of the Des Plaines Redevelopment Assn., negotiations for the remaining parcel needed for the mall site are now "going smoothly."

Paroubek told the Herald that groundbreaking for the mall will probably begin next spring on land bounded by Lee Street, Prairie Avenue, Center Street and the alley south of Ellinwood.

Paroubek also announced last week that the redevelopment association has begun to search actively for retailers to lease commercial space in the two-story mall.

PLANS FOR the 64-store mall were presented at a meeting last week of Des Plaines businessmen, who will be given first priority for floor space in the new structure, Paroubek said.

A report is expected soon from Benjamin and Lang, bond consultants on the feasibility of a $700,000 parking revenue bond issue to finance 1,200 parking spaces, redevelopment officials feel will be needed for downtown. Members of the city council are expected to meet with the bond experts this week at a special meeting.

Paroubek said the city officials have shown "total cooperation" with redevelopment plans.

Since June, the city council has authorized preparation of plans for widening Prairie, east of Graceland to an eventual connection with Thacker Street.

Redevelopment officials said at a June meeting that this widening into a four lane road is needed to provide a system for handling increased downtown traffic when the proposed mall and office buildings are completed.

At its July 19 meeting, the city council adopted a resolution approving $200,000 of the city's motor fuel tax allocation to be used to widen Prairie from Lee to Pearson Street. The total project is expected to cost about $500,000, according to City Eng. Robert Bowen.

AT THE JULY 6 meeting, the council authorized an application for $2 million in federal and state funds for a proposed River Road Overpass — part of the improved downtown traffic system needed for redevelopment.

The overpass — a raised highway bridge over Miner street and the Chicago and Northwestern Rwy. tracks in downtown Des Plaines, would reduce traffic hazards and allow more traffic through downtown, the application states.

The final redevelopment complex will consist of an open mall on Center south, of Ellinwood, a two block wide, "H" shaped, two-story enclosed mall, stretching from Lee to Pearson and two nine-story office buildings facing Ellinwood.

The first phase will consist of half of the total proposed mall, built on the southern half of the block, bounded by Lee, Prairie and Center. Later, an office building would be constructed facing Ellinwood, according to redevelopment officials.

Other plans include multi-story parking lots along the railroad right-of-way land on Ellinwood, and a building over the railroad tracks, between Lee and Pearson.

Hotline -- Someone You Can Talk To

tend training sessions where problems they might face in dealing with phone calls and referrals are simulated

Past training sessions have been conducted by Incentives, Inc., a Des Plaines Center for the treatment of emotional and drug problems, the Maine Township Mental Health Association, Grace Lutheran Church in Chicago, which has a program for runaway children, the Chicago Suicide Phone Service, a psychologist for the Illinois state hospitals, an ex-drug addict, and a suicide prevention representative from Elgin State Hospital

Plimpton said most of the volunteers are under 30, but that there are also parents, teachers and professionals included on the Hotline volunteer roster "We even have a retired couple answering the phones," he said.

The volunteers work in two-hour shifts as often as they can "There are always at least two of us sitting by the Hotline phones from 2 p.m. to midnight," one volunteer said.

"But we can always use more volunteers, especially permanent ones," the volunteer said. "Many of our workers will be going back to college in the fall. The more volunteers we get the sooner we can expand the hours of our service," he said.

WHEN THE HOTLINE phone rings, the volunteer on duty usually answers saying something like, "Hello, Hotline, may I help you?"

If the caller just wants to talk, the volunteer just talks. If he has a specific problem and wants specific information, the volunteer refers to a handy card catalog which lists social agencies in alphabetical order according to the problems they deal with

After the call is completed, the volunteer logs it in a confidential file according to the type of problem it involved. He also includes a short summary of the conversation in case the caller phones again.

The files for June listed the most frequent problems discussed in calls as dating, drugs, and emotional and personal problems. Other frequently discussed categories included family problems, legal problems, pregnancies, runaways and school problems

Records also show that most calls come on Mondays, Thursdays and Saturdays between the hours of 2 and 6 p.m. and 8 and 10 p.m. Nearly twice as many calls are from females as from males.

"We try to stress the fact that our service is confidential," one volunteer said. "Some people give their names and addresses right away. Others don't and we don't ask," he said.

"MANY PEOPLE HAVE called back for more information or to find a closer referral place. Sometimes they call back to tell us they have made an appointment at the place we referred them to," the volunteer, who asked not to be identified, said.

"We've heard them say often that talking to someone they didn't even know really helped them figure out their problems," he said.

"The importnat thing is to convince them that you want to listen to them. Some of them call and don't say a word. You just have to keep saying 'Do you want to talk about it?' until they either respond or hang up," the volunteer said.

"They may just want to talk or they may have a serious problem. It's vital that they hear a sympathetic voice and that they grow to trust that voice," he said.

There has been talk of merging Hotline with a similar proposed Maine Township Mental Health Association program. Dr. Edward Baranowski, association president, said he is trying to organize a conference with local professional people to discuss 24-hour service with a staff of counselors and psychiatrists.

HE SAID THE HOTLINE program could act as sort of an answering service for the association. Hotline volunteers could be trained by professionals and could continue counseling people on the phone, he said, until a serious problem comes up. Then the caller could be referred to a professional staff member.

Plimpton spoke in favor of the merging. "Basically we deal with problems of mental health anyway. If we merge with the association their trained people would be available to us," he said.

"The volunteers would have more intensive training and we could keep track of our referrals in a more professional way. Also, we wouldn't be plagued by financial problems," Plimpton said.

Another one of the volunteers spoke against the merging. "The volunteers are extremely dedicated now and they don't want to lose their opportunity to serve. If a caller has a problem that concerns mental health, we can just tell him to call the Mental Health Association," the volunteer, who also did not want to be identified, said.

"We're already expanding our own training sessions. Within the month all of our volunteers, including the original ones, will go through another intensive training program," he said.

"As far as being able to continue our program on a volunteer basis, we don't feel that our market of volunteers will deplete. Each time we have a new story or a new training session we reach new people," the volunteer said.

"WE'RE PLANNING NEW fund-raising projects all the time. We'll be able to meet our financial obligations without the backing of a professional association," he said.

Win At Bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

Oswald "Your mother wants us to write some articles on how to count hands"

Jim "She's been the family boss for 39 years We had better do as she asks. Here's a good example in a no-trump grand slam South must concentrate on 13s There are 13 cards in each suit and he needs 13 tricks"

Oswald "He had best make them. North has 22 high-card points opposite a 16-18 no-trump and will want to know what went wrong if South winds up one short"

Jim "South sees 12 top tricks and will make the grand slam if he can drop either black jack He should start by playing the red suit, because there is no problem there"

Oswald. "East drops a heart on the third diamond and West gets rid of a diamond on the third heart, so South knows each opponent started with seven red cards and six black ones."

Jim: "Now South cashes his ace-king-queen of clubs. East shows out on the third club and South should now have a complete count."

Oswald: "East had exactly seven red cards and two clubs. That leaves him with exactly four spades. Now South cashes dummy's ace and queen of spades, leads the three of spades, and finesses his 10-spot with absolute certainty of success."

Mid-Teen Tourney Action Starts Tuesday

The Des Plaines Mid-Teen League regular season ended late last week with four games which did not affect the standings in either the National League nor the American League.

The Elks took on Kunkel in the National League playoff Sunday but the results were not available at press time. Kunkel won the first half championship and the Elks won the second half championship. They played for the right to meet Bantam, the American League champion in both halves for the second straight year, in the Mid-Teen championship round.

Kunkel is the defending Mid-Teen champion, beating Bantam in two out of three games last season.

In Thursday's action Kunkel nipped First National Bank 6-5 and came back on Friday to down the Elks, in a game which did not affect the standings, 6-1.

Burchard trimmed the Optimists 7-6, the third straight win for Burchard over the Optimists in the second half, on Thursday and, on Friday, Sellergren won by forfeit over First National Bank.

Kunkel took a 1-0 lead in the top of the first against First National with a single by Joe Hanley and a pair of throwing errors.

First National took a 2-1 lead in the bottom of the first with Jack Patti's two-run home run over the left-center field fence with Mike Bistany, who had walked, on base.

Kunkel made it 3-2 in the third with a single by Ken Geimer, an error and a double by Dennis Willison.

First National tied the score in the fifth with a triple by Bistany and a single by Bill Zierke.

Kunkel tallied three runs in the top of the eighth with a double by Fred Campobasso, a fielder's choice, a walk to Mike Kowalski and a double by Dan Moss.

First National almost caught Kunkel with a two-run rally in the bottom of the eighth with an error, a walk to Patti, a walk to Bill Carl and a single by Rick Klecka.

Burchard took a 2-0 lead in the top of the first against the Optimists with a single by Keith Heerdegen, a double by Jim Buchholz and a double by Andy Richardson.

The Optimists scored once in the second with a walk to Pete Kesaris, a fielder's choice , a single by Paul Kosac, a walk to Craig Zaleski and a single by Kesaris.

Burchard went out on top 5-3 in the fifth as Alan Hanson doubled, Tom D'Andrea walked, Buchholz walked, a wild pitch occurred and Richardson singled.

The eventual winners added a run in the sixth as Ted Godawski singled, went to second on a wild pitch, to third on a single by Jeff Kalb and scored on a single by D'Andrea.

The Optimists made it 6-4 in the bottom of the sixth as Dalbke singled and scored on a double by Bruce Beam.

Burchard made it 7-4 in the seventh as Heerdegen singled, went to second on a passed ball, to third on a fielder's choice and scored on a passed ball.

The Optimists tallied twice in the bottom of the seventh with a walk to Jeff Heist, a single by Kosac, a single by Kesaris, a stolen base and a single by Mike Adams.

Details for the Kunkel-Elks game were unavailable. Kunkel was in control for most of the game.

Illini, Irish Head List

Notre Dame and the University of Illinois have supplied more members of the pro football Hall of Fame than any other college. Three Fighting Irish alumni and three from the Illini went on to pro football careers that earned them enshrinement. Thirteen other colleges boast two enshrinees apiece.

The three Notre Dame alumni in the Hall are Curly Lambeau, Wayne Millner and George Trafton, while Red Grange, George Halas and Shorty Ray represent Illinois.

Dons Advance In Tourney

Notre Dame's a long way from White Sox Park and the summer high school baseball championship but the Dons are just as close as anyone else.

The Dons trimmed Arlington High 5-4 Friday and came back to whip Hersey High 8-5 Saturday to keep alive in the county-wide tournament.

Notre Dame will play Conant High at Harrier Park in Morton Grove today at 6 p.m.

The highlight of the Dons' weekend was a seven-run third inning against Hersey.

A single by Wayne Brekke, a single by Marty Draths, a walk to Joe Saccomano, a double by Randy Kamowski, a single by Mike Callero, a home run by Jim Bokota, a single by Rick Pedi and a triple by Kevin Scotellaro gave Notre Dame its seven runs.

In the sixth frame, the Dons scored as Brekke walked, went to second on a single by Draths and scored on an error.

The Dons must win all this week to get into the championship round at White Sox Park.

by MARY SHERRY

When my husband says I'm penny wise and pound foolish, he is right. But not only is he right in the way he thinks. He knows, and I admit that when I shop I compute the price of canned goods to the very gram in search for a few cents' savings. Then in the same thought wave I can suggest blowing $30 on a dinner out for two.

But I am much more seriously penny wise and pound foolish when it comes to leftovers. I can't pass up a leftover for lunch. Oh, I know that I should be having a hard-boiled egg and cucumber sticks, but as soon as I open the refrigerator, supposedly to get the egg, a cold bowl of chili beckons irresistibly. Usually I instantly forget all about the egg, but when I have to rationalize, I convince myself that it would be a terrible waste not to eat the leftover. This costs me an average of 356 calories, but otherwise the meal is absolutely free.

NOW IT HAPPENS on occasion that there aren't any leftovers. One would think that under such a circumstance that it would be easy to have that egg and cucumber and grow thin.

But consider this kitchen scene, about 11:45 a.m. when my three children come in clamoring for a meal.

"What's for lunch?" they demand to know, singly and together.

I have the confidence of knowing, as does every mother, that unless lunch is p e a n u t butter sandwiches, someone doesn't like it.

"Macaroni and smoked sausage," I answer. Or I say, "Spaghetti," or "ravioli" or "lasagna."

One or more reply, "Yuk," or "Why do you ALWAYS have something I don't like?" or "Again? We just had that six months ago!"

Anyway, while this exchange is going on, my egg is cheerily being boiled to hardness, and I have decided not to scrape off the cucumber skin this time because I am so famished.

WHEN THE KIDS finally sit down I dish up and jealously serve their separate lunch, leaving a bit on the stove . . . just in case . . But soon that, too, is claimed.

By now, my egg and cucumber sticks have also disappeared amazingly fast and have left me the sensation of having not eaten for two days. So at this point my only hope is the child who doesn't like his lunch.

"Stop playing with it!" I yell after excusing the two who have finished. My tone is so authentic that I almost convince myself that I mean it.

"You have exactly four minutes to finish!" I announce grimly.

"Two minutes!" I threaten after three minutes.

The child stares in disgust at the remaining food for a little while longer until I dismiss him and mutter vague threats and warnings about what happens to those who don't finish their food

THEN I CLEAR his place and look at that luscious leftover It WOULD be a shame to waste it — to just throw it out, so . . Another 356 calorie lunch has been had.

Maybe if I think hard enough I can blame it on our society or on my upbringing, but it seems to be impossible to be both thrifty and thin.

Fashion
by Genie

Very bluntly speaking . . . no matter what's in fashion, it takes a good figure to wear it. The first of the month is a good starting point to take steps in eliminating bulges and flab.

What's needed is a daily exercise program and, of course, will power. Take advantage of all the fresh fruits and vegetables available. Substitute salads for big hot meals. They're a lot easier to fix anyhow.

The following exercises are given to Eastern Air Lines stewardesses to prepare them for new "mini pants" uniforms.

1. To tighten outer side of thighs, lie on back on floor. Place arms straight out on floor from shoulders and kick to reach opposite hand with toes. Repeat six times for each leg.

2 An easier inside-thigh tightener is to stand with legs six inches apart, arms at sides. Swing right leg to left, close to body, leading with the heel, return leg to standing position. Repeat six times. Reverse legs.

3 To firm hips and thighs and whittle waist, lie on back with arms outstretched from shoulders Bend right knee, roll as far as possible to left side, keeping arms and shoulders flat on floor, left leg straight. Repeat six times Reverse legs. If you do this with one lifted leg straight rather than bent at the knee, you work thighs even more.

4. An isometric thigh and derriere shaper to do whenever you can: Sit on a chair with legs together, feet flat on floor Tighten thighs and buttocks, hold to count of six, relax to count of six, repeat six times.

5. To tighten fanny and back of thigh, stand with legs six inches apart, arms at sides. Lift right leg back leading with heel, until you feel muscles tightening. Return to standing position. Repeat six times. Reverse legs.

An exercise program should start slowly and build gradually. Overdoing it at the beginning might cause strained muscles. It's best to exercise for a few minutes before breakfast each day, but if you know you won't do it then, exercise before going to bed at night. The body hugging styles are well worth the effort.

Operating Room Nurses Organize

The Association of Operating Room Nurses (AORN) has organized a new chapter for the northwest suburbs. The first meeting will be held Tuesay at 7:30 p.m. at Lake Forest Hospital, 660 Westmoreland, Lake Forest.

Miss Martha Parlapiano, president-elect of the national Operating Room Nurses, will be guest speaker. All nurses and students nurses interested in operating room techniques are invited.

The chapter has been organized so that nurses in this area can become more actively involved in AORN. Membership in the association offers such benefits as sharing experiences, knowledge of others in similar positions and providing opportunity for nurses to remain up-to-date.

Newly elected officers include Mrs. Shirley C Phillips of Palatine, president; Mr Primo Vary of Elk Grove Village, president-elect; Mrs. Shirley Jansen of Schaumburg, treasurer. Among new board members is Mrs. Patricia Heuer, Arlington Heights

Anyone interested in information about AORN may contact Mrs. Phillips, 927 E Cooper Drive, Palatine.

The Home Line
by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: Recently I was discussing with a friend how attractive a punch bowl was with dry ice in it; the "smoke" pouring out gave it real elan. My friend said that might be so, but she thought it was a dangerous practice and people were foolish to use dry ice in this fashion. What's wrong with it?—Lorraine H.

Well, if just a tiny piece of dry ice broke off from the main piece and was swallowed by an unsuspecting person it might be fatal. Used properly, it's a fantastic product — but it's obviously not for punch bowls

Dear Dorothy I probably sound pretty stupid but have always wondered exactly what happens when leavening agents (baking powder, baking soda or yeast) added to batters and doughs to make them rise. Do you mind explaining this to a neophyte cook?—Joe O.

Not stupid at all. I'll bet not one man a thousand can answer this question. When moisture is added to leavening agents, bubbles of carbon dioxide are formed. The gas penetrates into the air cells in the batter or dough and makes them grow in size. As the cells grow larger, the mixture rises. The heat in the oven makes the cells grow even larger and so the food rises still more. Toward the end of the baking time, the food no longer rises because the cell walls begin to set.

Dear Dorothy. No matter what kind of pan I use in cooking spaghetti or macaroni, it has never failed to stick. Any suggestions?—Eva B.

It sounds as if you are not using enough water. If you are using sufficient water and it still sticks, try lightly greasing the pan. Many people just put a lump of butter in the water when cooking pasta so that it won't boil over.

Dear Dorothy: My neighbor has some l o v e l y r o s e s f r o m which she has offered to let me get slips. Have you ever done this? Would love to try it if it isn't too difficult.—Louise A.

Slipping roses is one of the fun projects in a gardener's life. Cut a stem from a rose that has just bloomed, cutting just below a set of leaves, then strip off all but two sets of leaves. The end of the stem is wet, then dipped into a rooting hormone and put in a hole filled with sand and peat moss. This is then covered with a glass jar. The best time is the fall when the plant has all winter and spring to develop roots. It's a long time to wait for something in the garden but worth the small effort.

Dear Dorothy: Can I use canned fruit for a fruit pie filling? What do I use for thickening and in what amount?—Pat Solomon.

You certainly can. Many canned fruits have directions on the can for thickening the contents to make fruit pies. One friend uses 2 tbsp. flour to 3 cups filling and sugar to taste. Some use tapioca and some cornstarch. The thickening is different for the various kinds of fruit.
